HARRY THAW JUBILANT, SAYS JEROME BEATEN

MISS ELLA BREWER of Chelsea, who says policeman who arrested her for drunkenness, although she never had a drink in her life, insulted her.

GIRL ACCUSES POLICE OFFICER BRUTAL, SHE SAYS

Miss Ella Brewer of Chelsea, daughter of Elisha Brewer, a Boston manufacturer, who was arrested on the charge of drunkenness, although she says she has never tasted intoxicating liquors, today declared her intention to prefer charges against Patrolman John J. Horgan of the Charlestown station and the four other patrolmen who testified with him that they smelled liquor upon her breath.

"As I sat in the courtroom," said Miss Brewer's brother, John Brewer, general manager of Brewer & Co., elevator manufacturers at No. 17 Bowker street, "I turned to a man beside me and asked him, 'What do you think of that? My sister never touched liquor.'"

"That's nothing," said the man. "You ought to come here often and listen to the 'frameups.'"

Five officers testified that the young woman was intoxicated. Two of them qualified as experts by testifying that they could smell beer and whiskey.

Judge Charles J. Brown of the Charlestown Municipal Court freed the girl while the officers were still trying to convict her.

This is the girl's own story:

Her Own Story.

Thursday night I had been visiting some friends of mine at 13 Monument square, Charlestown. When I left the home of Mrs. Annie Cash, where I was visiting, Mrs. Cash accompanied me almost to City square, where I waited a considerable time for a Chelsea-bound car.

As I waited there two sailors addressed me. I turned away. They continued to annoy me.

I believe that the officers who arrested me saw the sailors and heard them try to talk, too.

After they had boarded the car, the policeman came up to me and said: "What were you talking to those sailors about?" I replied that I had not been talking with them. Then he insulted me.

Then he seized me by one arm. He was so rough he tore a part of my waist off. I have it at home. My arm is bruised.

Swore at Her, She Says.

He took me from there to the police station, against my protest. At the police station he refused to tell me what I was arrested for and swore at me again in the presence of other officers.

He then took me to the matron, who searched me. When they pushed me into a cell, I again protested. They said they would not

"I Sat in Cell and Heard Policemen Trump Up Story Against Me," Says Girl

"I shall appeal for justice to Police Commissioner O'Meara. Policemen cannot use me brutally. I have never tasted intoxicating liquor in all my life, and there was absolutely no justification in arresting me for drunkenness. In addition to all this, I sat in a cell and heard the policemen trump up the story they would tell against me in police court the next morning." MISS ELLA BREWER of Chelsea.

SCHMIDT SUICIDE FEARED

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Is Hans Schmidt, slayer of Anna Aumuller and counterfeiter, insane or did he commit this crime and plan dozens of others with calm malice? This is the great question with which the authorities are wrestling today and about which they are seeking the widest variety of expert opinion.

Schmidt, according to several alienists who have examined him, is a difficult problem. Opinion as to his sanity is divided. Some of the alienists will not hazard an opinion without further examination of Schmidt. The belief Schmidt is shamming insanity in order to escape the electric chair is expressed in some quarters.

Fears Suicide Attempt.

Upon the advance of Dr. Gustave Schober, one of the board of managers of the State Hospital for the Insane on Ward's Island, a special watch was today placed over Hans Schmidt, confessed slayer of Anna Aumuller, in the belief that he might try to commit suicide. Guards will watch Schmidt night and day in the Tombs and no articles which could be used for implements of self destruction will be allowed in his cell.

"Schmidt is a dangerous man," said Dr. Schober. "His is a complex mentality and his sense of right and wrong is oblique. Schmidt talked about his triunity of personality, that of the physician, the priest and the money maker. I found his heart to be abnormal.

"If Schmidt does not try to take his own life he may attempt to kill some of those about him."

Prominent Men for Jurors.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Theodore P. Shonts and Otto Kahn will head the coroner's jury panel if I can get them," said Coroner Feinberg today. "I also hope to get the services of Benedict J. Fitzpatrick and Isaac Gimbel, both of whom are noted for their interest in the public welfare.

"My idea is to fill the jury box with bankers, business men, railroad directors, manufacturers and other men of standing. I shall ask no man his religious belief. Any good citizen will be so overwhelmed by the enormity of the crime, as shown by the quantity and quality of the evidence, that I am convinced he will vote to hold Hans Schmidt, the confessed murderer, to the Grand Jury. The panel will be drawn tomorrow."

Vanderbilt Choir Goes on Strike

"Breakers" Furnish Music in Privately Conducted Church.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Sept. 22.—Music at All Souls' Episcopal church at Biltmore, George W. Vanderbilt's privately conducted church, the only one of its kind in America, was furnished yesterday by a makeshift choir, consisting of "strike breakers" gathered at various points in the city.

The choir struck within the past week owing to differences with the musical conductor, claiming he gave all solos and feature work to students in his school of music, Mr. Vanderbilt pays all expenses of the church.

Two Under Jail Sentence Escape

Break Through Window at Cambridge Court House.

Two prisoners sentenced to serve jail sentences Hoodlined their way out of the detention room at the Third District Court, Cambridge, today, just before a van drew up to transfer them to jail.

Michael Murphy and Alexander D. Morrison got away. Murphy was sentenced to serve five months for beating up an officer and thirty days for assaulting John Thomas. Morrison was under sentence of four months for non-support.

They were confined in the detention room with five other prisoners. Murphy and Morrison worked loose a heavy iron grating and crawled through the window to the free air of Spring street. The other prisoners refused to follow.

Thomas, who was badly beaten by Murphy, was taken to a hospital. He escaped from the institution yesterday.

Garrison Orders Philippines Probe

WASHINGTON Sept. 22.—An investigation of the Philippine slavery charges filed with the War Department by Dean Worcester, Secretary of the Interior of the Philippines, and Auditor W. H. Phipps, was ordered today by Secretary of War Garrison. Mr. Garrison instructed General Francis Burton Harrison to inquire into the alleged conditions throughout the islands as soon as he reaches Manila.

Humidity Gives 3,500 a Holiday

Today's humidity brought a half holiday to the 3,500 employes of the Waltham Watch Company at the Waltham plant. So much moisture had penetrated the plant that the officials decided a good steaming was necessary to dry out the rooms. This was done this afternoon, the plant having shut down at noon for the day.

Hunger Strike Wins.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Miss Agnes Lake, a militant suffragette who has been serving time for destruction of property, was released today because of illness induced by a hunger strike.

NURSE'S STORY OF STABBING

Miss Doris Lorraine Robinson, the Malden Hospital night nurse who was attacked and stabbed by an unidentified man in the corridor of the children's ward at the hospital, had sufficiently recovered today to give the hospital authorities her first detailed account of the assault. To Matron Smith of the hospital she said her assailant had cried as he caught her by the neck:

"I've been looking for you for a long time. I've got you now."

This led the Malden police to believe that the man, who made his escape after the attack, is the man about whom the hospital has complained several times. Orderlies from the hospital, citizens and a police detail made up of Metropolitan, Malden and Medford policemen, scoured the Middlesex Fells section today in a hunt for the fugitive.

Greeted as Heroine.

At the hospital today Miss Robinson was greeted as a heroine. It came out that she refused to scream for help during the attack simply because she feared her outcry might excite her rapid patients with possible fatal results to one or two of the youngsters.

Miss Robinson said she had been seized from behind by the man as she passed out of the children's ward to an ante room. She said she had never seen her assailant before. She said he was young, of medium height, stockily built, dark complexioned, and wore dark clothes and no hat.

"He grabbed me, hurling me to the floor," said Miss Robinson to the matron. "I realized that as there were many children nearby a call for help would alarm them, so I simply struggled without calling out. I kicked and hit him, finally making his desist. Then he said:

"'I know you, I'll get you if it takes ten years.'

"He stabbed me twice with a breadknife, which he later threw away as he ran out through the ward."

Kitchen Knife Stolen.

The knife, the police said, had been stolen from the hospital kitchen in the basement. Just how the unknown man entered the hospital was a mystery. Smith declared a man had been seen lounging about the hospital grounds shortly before the attack, and that the police had been notified. While a detail of patrolmen were on the way to the hospital Miss Robinson was assailed.

Roof-Top Hunt for a Phantom Burglar

Boston Tavern Guests Enjoy Search After Alarm Sounds.

Guests at the Boston Tavern who were awake early today, enjoyed the novelty of watching an unsuccessful burglar hunt within the shadow of the hotel. A burglar alarm in the basement of Aron son's shoe store at No. 385 Washington street, sounded and the building was quickly surrounded by reserves from the Court square station.

Above the first floor the building is occupied by Jason Weiler & Son, jewelers, and the police thought their safe was being blown. Sergeant Berry, followed by Patrolmen Trayers, Van Leighaan and Driscoll, went up the stairs on the run, but found nothing.

Suffragettes Lock Up Fire Stations

Then Start Blaze That Razes Six Buildings.

YORK, England, Sept. 22.—A suffragette fire, marked by a cunning device hitherto untried by the women, burned a $125,000 hotel in the middle of the town of Wimborne, Yorkshire, today. The fire was discovered in the municipal building which was soon destroyed. Thence the fire spread to neighboring stores and houses and within three hours six structures had been burned up. The doors of the fire stations were found to be locked and the keys were missing.

Bryan Buys New Hat Favored by Yodelers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—William Jennings Bryan has bought a new hat, a fuzzy "felt" of the type favored by swiss yodelers.

It is learned, however, that Mr. Bryan did not acquire his fondness for this style of "lid" through his recent association with other professional folk on the Chautauqua circuit. He was simply talked into the investment by a Washington shopkeeper. It set him back $5.

Now Seeks Divorce from Saharet Rose

CHICAGO Sept. 22.—Felix Von Ernst sius, millionaire broker who was divorced recently that he might wed Saharet Rose, the dancer, whose picture he fell in love with, brought suit today for a divorce from the Vaudeville headliner. The complaint charged the dancer with desertion and friendship with another man.

LAWYERS WARY OF NEW COUP

Ready to Combat Even Possible Indictment of Fugitive by New York Jury.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 22.—While Harry Thaw's lawyers were wary today of a possible new coup by Jerome from the New York end, Harry himself was frankly jubilant that Jerome is checkmated.

"I have Jerome beaten a mile now," said Harry to one of his friends here. "I no longer worry about him. He can run after me all he likes and it won't do him any good."

Harry was mildly concerned today over the arrival of his mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, from Pittsburgh. She was scheduled to be here some time this evening. Harry is impatient to see her.

Detective Feiser arrived at the State House this noon from Rochester. His coming gave an extra quickening to the increasing interest in the Thaw case. With the prisoner here that arraignment for tomorrow's hearing were begun.

Thinks He Plans New Charge.

Jerome made some sort of an indictment or extradition campaign to lock up New Yorker required upon Governor Foss here. There is no extradition.

Fraser thinks Bell sure today that Jerome is getting a new charge against Thaw ready and the New York County Detectives Coming from the big town in a long train right just to get Thaw back to Matteawan. But the crime

3 KILLED, 30 INJURED; LONG ISLAND WRECK

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Three persons were killed and thirty injured today when two passenger trains on the Long Island Railroad crashed together head-on at Eighth street and Third avenue, College Point, L. I.

The wreck was attributed to thick fog which hid the signals. Both trains were crowded, the one coming to New York being filled with commuters on their way to work. The wreck occurred on a curve.

Ten ambulances were rushed to the scene of the wreck, and while some were being taken to hospitals, physicians knelt in the rain administering first aid to the more seriously injured.

The dead are:

HEHLEIN, CHARLES—Motorman of eastbound train known as White Stone local.

LOUDER, FREDERICK—Motorman of Westbound train.

ROERCKEL, GEORGE—Long Island railroad conductor, off duty at the time.

Finds New Dipper in the Milky Way

The Milky Way—the real Great White Way, factually and celestially speaking—isn't running to waste after all, for Professor Charles Nevers Holmes of Smith College has "discovered" another "Big Dipper" in the heavens.

This makes the third of the celestial dippers with which the Milky Way fluid might be scooped up. Professor Holmes says the new dipper consists of the "great square" of Pegasus for a bowl while other stars in the constellation Andromeda form the handle.

FOSS SPEECH NOTICE HE IS TO RUN AGAIN?

Governor Foss today sent out in pamphlet form thousands of copies of the address that he delivered before the Worcester Chamber of Commerce on Thursday, September 11, on the railroad situation in Massachusetts, in which he denounced the control of the New England railroad situation by private banking interests and the foreign control of labor.

In political circles the Governor's action in distributing copies of the speech was taken as a notice of his being a candidate for a fourth term. The Governor has until October 5 to file notices of his intention to run.

The closing paragraph of the speech is regarded by politicians as significant. It follows:

You see the concentration of capital and its domination upon one side. And you see the concentration of the highest paid labor on your railroads and its domination. You see that neither the capital nor the labor is working for you or your protection.

I stand here as an independent citizen, wearing the cloak and collar of no party, and I denounce the foreign control of New England railroads and the foreign control of the labor that captain the iron horse at the head of every passenger train in New England.

It is my duty to point out to you the facts. It is your duty to think of the dangers and that it may later be your duty to act.

J. Pierpont Morgan Lands in England

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Sept. 22.—Among the passengers arriving here today on the liner Kaiser Wilhelm were J. Pierpont Morgan and his sister, Mrs. W. P. Hamilton. Mr. Morgan said that he was going to London and the Continent for a vacation.

Pters Takes Oath as Congressman

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Representative John A. Peters of the Third Maine District today took oath of office in the House. Peters recently won the three-cornered contest which followed the death of Representative Goodwin.

Bryan Buys New Hat Favored by Yodelers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—William Jennings Bryan has bought a new hat, a fuzzy "felt" of the type favored by swiss yodelers.

RED SOX GAMES POSTPONED.

Bad days of wet grounds the games booked between the Red Sox and the White Sox scheduled for today at Fenway Park was postponed. A double-header will be played tomorrow.

HELD FOR BROCKTON SHOOTING.

BROCKTON, Sept. 22.—Andrew Langley was arraigned in court today for shooting A. Eugene Woodworth, foreman inspector of buildings. He was held in $5,000. Langley on Saturday shot Woodward during a quarrel. Woodward's wounds are not serious.

LONDON'S OMNIBUS STRIKE SETTLED.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The omnibus strike was settled today.

GROSSMAN GOES TO WATCH ON JEROME

for which Thaw was deemed insane and thus committed to Matteawan was committed in New York County, which should logically bear any Thaw expense.

The idea it was believed in the Thaw camp today that Jerome is trying to divert attack on Thaw in New York County.

The Thaw lawyers also believe Jerome may wait until the eleventh hour before springing any snare he has set for the fugitive, so that the Thaw lawyers will not have time before the extradition hearing, to make any counter-move.

Judge Chase, Merrill Shurtleff and the rest of the Thaw camp will not be surprised if Jerome holds off until the actual hearing before uncovering whatever new attack he has. The hearing is awaited with an anxiety almost painful.

The report of a Jerome coup spread and public interest in the extradition hearing is at high peak. Anyone who is in any authority at the State House is besieged with applications for admission to the hearing, especially from women.

Reservations have been made of why few seats along Thaw's route from the Eagle Hotel to the State House, because the public realizes that it cannot join into the hearing itself.

Hearing in Senate Chamber.

The hearing will take place in the Senate chamber of the State House. The attendance will probably be limited to the principals in the case, officials, counsel, relatives of Thaw and the press. Governor Felker does not propose to make the floor of a woodframe of the Thaw type that he can help.

It is not at all certain that the extradition matter will be settled tomorrow or Wednesday. The Governor may take several days before he renders his decision. Meanwhile Thaw will be safe under the protection of the Federal writ of habeas corpus.

When Judge Aldrich, in the United States District Court at Littleton, suspended the writ hearing, pending the extradition hearing, he announced that the rights of both parties to the writ would be fully protected.

Moses Grossgan, one of Thaw's New York lawyers, who rushed on here yesterday, darted back to New York before night to keep tabs on Jerome.

"At present Jerome's sole chance of obtaining Thaw would seem to rest on the warrant in the possession of Sheriff Morschek of Poughkeepsie County, New York, ordering Thaw's arrest on a charge of conspiring to effect an escape from Matteawan.

The refusal of the Dutchess County Grand Jury to return an indictment for conspiracy looked like a death blow to Jerome's hopes, but the "Nemesis" is renowned as a fighter to the finish. Unless he can secure an indictment on a specific charge, attorneys declare there is a strong probability that Jerome, as special counsel for the State of New York, may be denied the privilege of appearing at the hearing here tomorrow.

It is persistently rumored that Jerome will ask a postponement of Tuesday's hearing until he can perfect his plans for the new coup on which he is said to be working desperately in New York.

Thaw's Future Plans.

Thaw plans to leave New Hampshire for Pennsylvania, in the event of his winning his freedom, without risking an entry into any other State. This he may do by boarding a ship at Portsmouth, the State's only seaport on its short coast line. Or he might board a yacht from Hampton Beach, near which some Pittsburgh cousins are staying, having had a Summer home there for several years.

That Thaw's array of legal counsel—to be reinforced by former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell of Boston and attorneys from several other States—fear the rumored Jerome coup, was indicated today by the hurried departure for New York of Grossman.

Look for Jerome Today.

Mr. Grossman arrived here with former Judge Olmstead. He denied there was any friction among counsel for Thaw, as reported, and this was also denied in statements by Thaw himself, William A. Stone, W. K. McKeown, who arrived yesterday from Montreal, and Messrs. Shurtleff and Chase, New Hampshire attorneys.

With the probable arrival today of W. T. Jerome and Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, the cast for the next act in the big legal drama will be complete. Mrs. Thaw and Jerome will take personal charge of the final vamps.

Conference in "Throne Room."

Grossman was in conference for several hours, immediately after his arrival, with Harry Thaw, in the "throne room" of the Eagle Hotel, made famous in the writings of Novelist Winston Churchill of Cornish. The New Hampshire lawyers were not admitted to this conference. Attorney Grossman took dinner late in the day with Thaw. Grossman and several of the other Thaw counsel went to the office of Judge Chase, carrying several satchels containing legal papers.

It is understood that the principal, if not the only, argument for Thaw's release, will be made by Judge William M. Chase, who is a local lawyer, and chosen head of Thaw's legal array in the Granite State.

The Thaw lawyers claim that, now

MISS JOAN WICKHAM, militant suffragist organizer, who is arranging for the coming visit of Mrs. Pankhurst to the United States.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—It was said today at the offices of the Women's Social and Political Union that Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, founder of militant suffragist methodists, would try to meet President Wilson personally in the United States and is anxious to appear before the American Congress and deliver a speech. Mrs. Pankhurst, who is president of the union, will sail for the United States from France about October 15.

Miss Joan Wickham, militant suffragist organizer who is arranging for Mrs. Pankhurst's tour in the United States, says the latter has no fear of being excluded by the immigration officials.

the charge of conspiracy has been dismissed by the Dutchess County Grand Jury, the only other charge which can legally rest against Thaw aside from some more subterfuge, is that he is an insane person. Thaw's lawyers, who have been looking up the law and decisions bearing on such matters, reiterated today that no case of the extradition of a lunatic can be found.

Thaw's knowledge of law, unusual for a layman, has compelled the admiration of his own counsel. It became known today that when papers were drawn up for submission to Judge Aldrich of the United States Court in the habeas corpus appeal, seven lawyers were in consultation. When they had drafted the appeal, it was shown to Thaw. On his first reading of the lengthy document he discovered three flaws, one of them considered very important, that had escaped the attention of the attorneys. He said:

"You have made me virtually admit that I am insane in New Hampshire. That must be cut out. I believe it would prove fatal to my case."

The lawyers, voting Thaw a wonder, were unanimous in sustaining all his objections.

Thaw Played Piano.

Thaw spent all day Sunday indoors on account of the rain. Much of the time, when not engaged with counsel, he was playing on the piano, his selections including hymns, ragtime, Southern melodies and love songs. The hotel corridors were thronged with listeners to the music issuing from the throne room.

He had been looking forward to an automobile ride, but said it had proved, despite the cheapest outdoors, to be the happiest day he had spent since leaving Matteawan. This was partly on account of the glad news concerning the refusal of the Dutchess County Grand Jury to indict him for conspiracy, and the confidence that he would soon be legally set free.

The Thaw hearing Tuesday will take place in the Senate chamber at the State House. If Thaw loses by Governor Felker's decision, Attorney Grossman declared, the case will go to the District Court. If he loses there his case will be argued before the Justices of the Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston, and if need be from there to the United States Supreme Court.

Find Woman Dead in Lodging House

Early today the body of an unidentified woman was found in the lodging house at No. 1103 Washington street by night clerk Alfred Weston. Dr. Louis Hermann was summoned, and pronounced death probably due to natural causes, but Medical Examiner Leary was notified. She was about thirty-two, five feet and four inches and weighed 125 pounds. She wore a black serge coat and skirt, a black and white striped waist, black stockings, black buttoned boots with velvet tops and a buff veil.

GIRL CHARGES THAT OFFICER INSULTED HER

lock the door, but they slammed it behind me as soon as I stepped in.

There was absolutely no justification in arresting me for drunkenness.

In addition to all this, I sat in a cell and heard the policemen trump up the story they would tell against me in police court the next morning.

It seemed to me that every officer in Charlestown came and stared in at me in the cell. Each one asked me the same questions, who I was, where I lived and the like. I replied to them all civilly, but when I asked them to telephone my sister, who was waiting at home for me, they laughed and said they would find her after a while.

The next morning they dragged me into court and several of the policemen who visited me the preceding night, but not all of them, testified that I was intoxicated. Why the policemen said they could tell from my breath I had been drinking beer and whiskey.

I have never tasted a drop of intoxicating liquor in my life. I don't even take tea or coffee.

While they were trying me the judge who presided said something interrupting them and my lawyer told me I was beaten.

Accused Policeman Silent.

Patrolman John Horgan, who arrested the girl on the charge of drunkenness, refused to discuss the case today. He said: "I have nothing to say."

Horgan has been on the police department sixteen years and was transferred to the Division 13 station at City Square from Division 3—

Lieutenant John A. O'Rourke, acting captain of Division 15, who was in charge of the station when Miss Brewer was arrested, and other officers also maintain silence.

Catch Providence Burglar at Work

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 22.—Following a series of unsolved burglaries and attempts at safe-breaking, a cordon of ten police reserves today surrounded a store at No. 42 Exchange place, and captured a man, giving his name as Eugene Marsh, in the act, they claim, of drilling a hole in the safe. Marsh, the police say, had drilled three holes, and was making a fourth. At his side was a pound can of giant powder, as well as a general supply of burglars' tools.

Continue to Bar Irish Potatoes

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 22.—The Federal horticultural board of the Department of Agriculture has decided indefinitely to continue the quarantine against the Irish potato in an effort to stamp out the potato wart. No potatoes may be imported from the British Isles, Canada, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and the island of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

Strangers Fill John D.'s Pew

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 22.—John D. Rockefeller sat alone for a time yesterday in his pew at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church. As the church filled, the millionaire became nervous, and many times glanced at the vacant seats by his side. Finally, he called an usher and requested that his pew be filled with strangers. This was done.

Persian Prince Shot by His Wife

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 22.—Persian Prince Abner Mirza lies in a hospital here with two revolver shots in his chest, fired by his wife. Polaire Angered by Seizure of Costume

Threatens to Dance Anyway at Allentown Tonight.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Mlle. Polaire, Parisian dancer famous for what has been called extreme beauty and sublime ugliness by different critics, will begin tonight at Allentown, Pa., with Lady Constance Stewart Richardson and Gertrude Hoffman her dance across the United States.

Polaire said the customs men had seized upon the dress she was to dance in at her opening performance, and she threatened to dance anyway. Allentown has hopes of the customs men.

Miss Polaire has the noted pearl nose-ring too, until she tore it from her left nostril and announced she wouldn't endure its pinching for any press agent. She was asked about the modern American dances.

"I love them all," she said, "turkey trot, tango, bounce bogg—they are nice, nice."

Preston Gibson Baby $20,000,000 Heiress

Daughter, Born at Beverly, Has Illustrious Ancestors.

Little Miss Gibson, $20,000,000 heiress of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Gibson of Washington, began her second day of life today at Beverly, where she was born, with a lusty cry that indicates, the nurse says, her lungs are sarong.

Baby Gibson has as illustrious a set of ancestors as it is the fortune of any child to have. Senators, Supreme Court justices and even Presidents are blood relations.

Little Miss Gibson's grand uncle is Richard Lee Edward D. White of the Supreme Court. She is the great-granddaughter of the late Senator McMillan through her mother, who was the late Mrs. Jarvis of Washington, and the granddaughter of the late Senator Gibson on her father's side.

Pauper Grave for Girl Hotel Suicide

Woman Who Jumped from Bellevue July 13 Unidentified.

Unless someone comes forward at once to establish the identity of the body of "Mrs. Strobe," the girl who committed suicide at the Hotel Bellevue July 13, by jumping from a ninth-story window, will be buried in a pauper's grave at Mount Hope cemetery.

Medical Examiner Magrath has held the body at the North Grove morgue for nine weeks. Scores have viewed the body, but none have been able to identify it.

GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" settles sour, gassy stomachs in five minutes—Time It!

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store, and then, if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

DELANO AND ELOPING BRIDE ARE FORGIVEN

A happy sequel to the elopement romance of Curtis Delano, twenty-three, of Newton, and Dorothea J. Strous of Cincinnati, O., was announced today by the groom's father, William G. Delano, of the Boston wholesale grocery firm of Delano & Potter. The parents of both bride and groom have forgiven the couple, he declared.

The Delano honeymoon will begin tomorrow, when they start housekeeping in the residence now being furnished for them at No. 54 Crescent street, Cambridge. They were married at Concord Junction, July 26, but have lived apart.

Following the announcement of their marriage, the bride's parents sent word that she must come home immediately, while duty summoned the groom back to the U. S. S. Delaware. Delano was in the United States submarine signal service, and rush orders were received for his ship to sail to engage in target practice.

The couple met while the young man was ashore on leave of absence at Duxbury, where the bride's parents have a Summer home.

Miss Strous was known widely in Cincinnati social circles. Young Delano is a graduate of Newton High School and of Cornell. At both schools and college by distinguished himself in athletics.

Prince Rospigliosi Dies of Pneumonia

ROME, Sept. 22.—Prince Don Giuseppe Rospigliosi, head of the famous family of that name, and husband of Mrs. Marie Held Pankhurst, of New Orleans and Boston, died today of pneumonia. Mrs. Pankhurst was divorced from her American husband shortly before she met and and married the Italian prince. She is a daughter of the late Samuel C. Reid, of Washington, and is well known in Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York society. She and Prince Rospigliosi were married in 1901. The Princess was never recognized by the Roman aristocracy.

O'Donovan Rossa Is Taken to Hospital

J. O'Donovan Rossa, famous Irish patriot, who has been near death in his Staten Island home for more than a year, has been taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, New Brighton, Rossa's island is reported daily growing weaker. Broken in health by long and unjust imprisonment, recalls his struggles against England. "So help me God," he said in his last, "I will wage war against her (England), until she is stricken to her knees or I am stricken to my grave."

Miss O'Brien a Bride.

The wedding took place today of Miss Mary G. O'Brien, a popular Roxbury girl, to Joseph P. Butler, chief inspector of the Boston schoolhouse department, of No. 4 Linden street, South Boston. The marriage was solemnized in SS. Peter and Paul's Church, West Broadway, by the Rev. W. H. Grant. Miss Elizabeth Ryan was bridesmaid, and W. J. Cleary best man.

Lady Decies and Her Daughter Doing Well

Second Child Born to the Former Vivien Gould.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Lady Decies, who was Miss Vivien Gould, and her second child, also a daughter, are both doing well today.

On August 17, 1912, Lady Decies gave birth to a daughter, Eileen Vivien De la Poer. Lady Decies, who is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, was married on February 7, 1911, at the age of nineteen, to John Graham Hope Horsley Beresford, the fifth Baron Decies. They are at the home, Betten Park, Stoke Pogis.

Bulgaria and Turks to Force Greece

COLOGNE, Ger., Sept. 22.—The correspondent of the Cologne Gazette at Constantinople telegraphs today that he has gained the impression from conversations with several foreign ambassadors to Turkey that they believe it quite possible for the Turkish and Bulgarian Armies to come to an agreement to operate jointly against Greece, if that nation refuses the conditions of peace proposed by Turkey.

Plan Great Home Rule Rally Oct. 5

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Irish-Americans of New York have decided to unite in a great rally at Carnegie Hall on Sunday evening, October 5, for the purpose of adding further impetus to the Home Rule bill from this side of the Atlantic.

FATHER SPIED ON CUPID IN AYKROYD SWIM

A real romance of the sea, with D. Cupid strongly in the swim after defeating an "angry papa" and a pair of paternal field glasses, is the love story of pretty Alsie Aykroyd, the Boston girl swimmer, who on October 1 becomes the bride of Daniel O'Rourke, a supervisor in the Boston park department. As Miss Aykroyd tells it, she literally swam her way into love.

Miss Aykroyd says O'Rourke proposed to her at the top of Boston Lighthouse immediately after her swim to that beacon two years ago. Later the girl was wooed by her sweetheart after the two had swum to a rowboat out of the reach of a pair of field glasses her father used in watching her at her swimming. This is the swimmer's story of how she was courted and won in the waters of Boston harbor:

"I met Mr. O'Rourke at a dance about three years ago. When I swam to Boston Light two years ago he accompanied me with friends in a rowboat. My father and brother were in a motor launch, but they didn't know who O'Rourke was.

"O'Rourke helped me from the water after the swim, and after I had dressed took me to the top of the lighthouse tower. There he proposed to me and I consented.

"Father may have suspected something, but he said nothing. After that, however, he went to Wood Island Park when I went to swim. Dan and I would swim off shore to a boat and meet there. One day father brought a pair of field glasses and discovered us. Then he ordered me never to see O'Rourke again.

"We are to be married October 1, and will live in East Boston. My father was furious when he learned of my coming wedding, and I went to live with my aunt."

"Go Ahead With Bill," Says Devlin

BELFAST, Sept. 22.—Joseph Devlin, the Irish Nationalist, M. P., for West Belfast, in a speech at Tullyerou, referring to Lord Loreburn's proposal for a conference of all party leaders on the Irish question, said:

"The only right and safe policy is to go ahead with the home rule bill, while it holds the field. It is a good, reasonable bill, and it is the basis of lasting peace. Its passage may occasion a few riots in Belfast, but they would occur in any case."

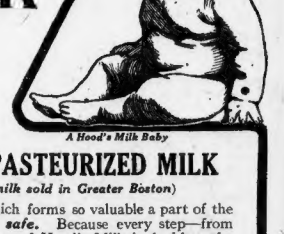
HOOD'S-THE SAFE MILK



A Hood's Milk Baby

The baby thrives—after weaning—on cow's milk—if that milk is pure, rich in nutriment and free from injurious germs—But it is vitally important that the milk used for the baby be safe milk. That is why doctors specify—

HOOD'S PERFECTLY PASTEURIZED MILK

(The only perfectly pasteurized milk sold in Greater Boston)

It is just as important that the milk which forms so valuable a part of the diet of adults should be pure, clean, safe. Because every step—from pasturage to delivery—in the distribution of Hood's Milk is doubly safeguarded, it is a necessity in discriminating homes.

"Harry Thaw was the victim of the prettiest woman in New York. He was maddened with passion and jealousy."—Rev. William M. Tufts, D. D., Pastor First Presbyterian Church, Columbus Avenue.

THE LOVE STORY OF EVELYN AND HARRY

CHAPTER XXV.

"Musing fell sadly in his sullein mind."
—The Faerie Queene.

Wednesday morning, the second day after the shooting. Harry Thaw's lawyers found that they had a hard client to handle from a legal standpoint at least.

Right away Harry was developing a tendency to be his own boss in his own murder crisis, even as he had been in every other contingency so far.

The two alienists for the State, Dr. Flint and Dr. MacDonald, who had had a brief survey of Harry the day before, arranged to make a more extended examination of him the next day.

The defence demanded that it be represented at this examination as well. Mr. Olcott, the new counsel in charge, had retained the services of Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, another noted alienist. Harry was to be examined at eleven o'clock in the morning.

That second night in a cell too, on Harry. He could not sleep well. He was awake early. Alone with his thoughts, he had come to a vague realization that he might be in the most serious trouble of his reckless life.

At seven o'clock Harry was let out of his cell into the corridor for an hour's exercise, if he wished, before breakfast. He paced up and down the corridor thoughtfully and slowly all this hour. His hands were clasped behind his back. His brow was wrinkled. His eyes were downcast.

When coffee and rolls—at his request—were brought, he ate in a perfunctory, abstracted manner.

Just then an interruption came. Illustrating the eternal feminine tendency to shed sympathy and ink upon every masculine homicide. This interruption was a bundle of seventeen letters brought by the warden. Nearly all were from women, strangers to Harry. He barely glanced at the hysterical missives, before casting them aside. For once in his life Harry was not interested to billets-doux.

A Letter from Evelyn.

But one letter, which Harry read twice, was from Evelyn. She merely wrote that she would be at the Tombs that day to see him. Evelyn had not been since they parted at the elevator entrance on the roof of Madison Square Garden the night of the shooting —Harry in charge of Patrolman Delee and Evelyn escorted out by Truxton Beale and Thomas McCaleb.

After breakfast, Harry waited in his cell until he should be taken before the alienists. He had consented the day before, when Mr. Olcott notified him of this examination, to be examined as to his mental condition. So Mr. Olcott did not come to the Tombs, but merely sent Dr. Hamilton.

Harry was taken from the cell by Deputy Sheriff O'Keefe, who linked himself to the prisoner by the handy strain of handcuffs known as "Nippers." In his free hand Harry carried a lighted cigar. He was walked across the Bridge of Sighs again and into a room used as a library for the District Attorney's office in the Criminal Courts building.

There Harry Thaw encountered a rather formidable battery of alienists. There was Dr. Hamilton for his side. There were Dr. Flint and Dr. MacDonald, also Dr. Dr. William Mabon for the prosecution. Assistant District Attorney Garvin was on hand.

Harry did not present a very smart appearance. His clothes were rumpled. He was unshaven and he looked worried.

Dr. MacDonald of the State forces started to make introductions, saying:

"This is Dr.——"

"I beg your pardon," said Thaw abruptly, "I will answer no questions whatever."

Thaw Blocks Alienists.

Here was a blockade right at the start. Alienists depend much, in their examination of subjects, upon answers to questions. When a subject positively will not talk the examination naturally becomes complicated.

Dr. MacDonald started to explain that they merely wished to talk of Harry's mental condition, when the prisoner interrupted by objecting because he had no lawyer there.

Then they sent up to Olcott's office. The latter sent down Terence McManus, one of his staff. But Harry wouldn't look at McManus. So word was sent back for Mr. Olcott to come, and see if he could coax his client to submit to examination.

While they were waiting Harry turned to Dr. Flint and asked about his son, who had gone to Yellowstone Park. Harry averred that the Park was not what it used to be.

Turning to Dr. Hamilton, his own expert, Harry said.

"Doctor, will you prescribe a cigar?" (meaning for himself).

Dr. Hamilton drew one from his own pocket. Harry lighted it, puffed a bit, then locked over to Dr. MacDonald and said: "I suppose you are too wise to smoke much?"

"Well, I try to do such things in moderation," replied the alienist.

Harry Discusses Smoking.

"And you think that people are superior who do not smoke," retorted Harry, "but is it not distinctly normal for men to smoke?"

"Normal," ejaculated Dr. MacDonald, surprised at the turn the talk was taking.

"Is it distinctly normal," Harry went on, "for a male human being to be born without the habit of smoking and without sufficient predilection to acquire the habit?"

Dr. MacDonald replied: "Some show no preference for tobacco, while others do."

Just then Mr. Olcott came in. He was much disturbed. He took Harry one side.

"I won't be examined, not today," Harry told him vehemently, "my nerves are unstrung. The tension is too great."

Mr. Olcott asked him to give a better reason.

"I haven't any," said the recalcitrant client, "I have no reason at all. Put it down to obstinacy, if you wish."

"This refusal will hurt you," said Mr. Olcott.

"I don't care," replied Harry. "Nothing but absolute force will get me to allow myself to be examined or to say anything today. I think I ought to see Dr. Hamilton and then talk with Mr. Delafield. Later I'll tell you whether I'll see this committee or not."

Mr. Olcott explained that Thaw refused to be examined then. They gave it up. Harry, cigar-butt in hand, was led back to the Tombs. There he found that his wife and his brother, Josiah C. Thaw, had been waiting a half-hour to see him.

To Be Continued.

DICK SEARS TELLS OF THAW'S DAY WITH MUSIC AND LAWYERS

By DICK SEARS.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 22.—It seemed to be a very busy day at the Eagle Hotel. Lawyers were arriving from New York and immediately going into the "throne room" for conference.

After it was all over I asked Thaw if he had any statement, and said: "Rather a busy day for you."

He said: "No, not so busy as two days ago. I want to go out for a walk, but this time some one has to go with me. I got up very early, expecting to go to church, but Marshal Nute said no. He is a very religious man and I thought he would go with me. I did not care what church I went to, so long as I went."

I asked Thaw if he heard the chimes and were they not beautiful. He said: "No, the only chimes I heard were the automobile horns in the garage back of my room."

After dinner he got his music out and played on the piano in the parlor for some little time. He has two new books, one popular music and the other classical music.

Just as he was playing one of his favorite selections he was called to his room by Mr. Shurtleff, one of his attorneys, and was later followed in by a great army of legal advisers. This conference lasted two hours. He then came out and noticed some women in the parlor near the piano. They asked him to play.

Thaw said: "I cannot when there are any others that care to play myself, but won't you play?" directing his conversation to one of the women.

She said: "I would if I had my music."

Thaw replied: "Oh, I will loan you mine," and went to his room and got out his two new books.

"The classical book is the better of the two," he said. "I like it better."

Thaw stood leaning over the piano chatting for a while, then went back to his room, after saying it had been a very restful day for him.

One of Thaw's attorneys told me Thaw is smarter than a great many lawyers.

Judge Olmsted arrived here with Mr. Grossman of New York. I asked Grossman if there was any truth in the report of dissension among the lawyers. He replied: "When I left Concord for New York I laid out each lawyer's work and also hired Judge Chase to make the argument before the Governor when I could have done it myself."

RETAINING OF O'CONNELL MAY MEAN SHIFTING OF THAW CASE TO BOSTON

The announcement that former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell of this city, expert in immigration and extradition law, is numbered among the Thaw lawyers caused lively interest in Boston in the expectation that the Thaw case may be shifted to this city.

If Governor Felker of New Hampshire grants extradition of Thaw, then the "Man from Matteawan" will reappear before Judge Edgar Aldrich of the United States District Court for New Hampshire on the federal writ of habeas corpus which was suspended last Wednesday.

An appeal from Judge Aldrich's Court would come before the appellate session of the United States District Court (formerly the United States Circuit Court of Appeals). This court holds most of its sessions in Boston, though it also sits in Portland, Me., and other federal centres in New England.

Mr. O'Connell was called into the Thaw case on account of his special knowledge of and long experience in extradition and immigration matters.

For four years in Congress he was on the Naturalization and Immigration Committee. He has handled many such cases in his private practice in Boston.

"THAW WILL MAKE GOOD WITH CHANCE," SAYS DR. TUFTS

Two Boston pastors gave differing opinions of Harry Thaw, the Rev. Dr. Tufts of the First Presbyterian Church saying "he will make good," and the Rev. Cortland Myers at Tremont Temple

THAW'S OWN STORY
Signs of Insanity
By HARRY K. THAW

Copyright, 1913, by H. K. Thaw.

If a man is really sane, alienists will so testify straight out without making any allowances. If a man is really insane alienists will testify straight out. These have been cases where both sides testified straight out to contrary opinions, but it is doubtful if both sides can be honest where one side testifies a person is free from any sign of insanity and the other denies it. This does not necessarily mean that alienists on one side have deliberately started out to falsify. It sometimes happens that before they have examined a person alienists form or express an opinion, and then they stick to it afterwards, although they have meanwhile learned that they are wrong. Of course an honest alienist would change his opinion when he learned that he was wrong.

Such apparently false testimony has brought criticism, and it has been proposed to allow only celebrated alienists to give testimony. I may be permitted to speak of something very funny about this proposed reform.

It would result in giving a little legislative monopoly to the very same alienists who testified in the Peaslee case, and in my case at the commission in 1907 (where alienists swore in open-meeting subject to three breaths. They testified that I was responsible June 25, 1906, and next breath claimed I was insane at the same time, which was false on its face, and in the Captain Haines case and in the Robin case. Now these are the cases in which alienists attracted most criticism, yet it would be exactly those alienists who testified in these cases who would be given full sway by all these proposed reforms.

Better Chance Now.

Perhaps "funny" is not the word to apply to some of these proposed reforms; for it has been proposed to have the alienists appointed by the judge, but limit the judge to three very alienists who brought up the criticism. The present way of having each side put on alienists (State paying for penniless defendant) may not be perfect, but it does give a jury or even a judge a better chance to give a fair verdict than any new scheme that gave additional latitude to the same alienists who have caused the present dissatisfaction.

Let me mention that some of the psychiatrists who appeared in the abovementioned cases are considered scrupulous physicians.

To return to the signs of insanity. Every lunatic shows his insanity in ways of his own, and the only sign invariably present is that every lunatic is unreasonable to an unobtainable extent.

The saying that you must have some brains to go insane, is nonsense as generally used, as the stupidest sane man may become insane, but the saying is correct at bottom, for an idiot can't go insane nor can an animal. The structural lobes of the human cortex are invariably affected in their functioning in insanity, according to the authorities on the subject.

Causes Not Known.

All the causes of this malfunctioning are not yet known. It may be due to a lesion there, or to defect in the blood from faulty metabolism or in the supply of blood to the cerebrum, causing malnutrition.

A man who is working hard for his family and has difficulties in paying family bills may become insane if he bears bad news. Insanity may begin after a shock, a fright, a bereavement, or a disappointment. A man may get nervous either or he may become depressed and irritable. He then may fuss over what seemingly have worried him before, and may break down and become insane. The worrying upsets the digestion, the supply of blood to the brain decreases or becomes anaemic, and this may not only develop a latent tendency to mental disease but sometimes actually causes insanity in a person free from taint.

Whether stricken in this way or in any other way once mental disease strikes a person the change will be seen by his own family and companions. The aforementioned speaks his thinking processes and gets insane thoughts which other persons cannot agree with, which at first shock the hearer out of touch with his surroundings. The pain him out of touch with his surroundings. The pain him out of touch with his surroundings. The pain him

TRIO THOUGHT DROWNED SAVED BY RIVADAVIA

The mystery in the fate of three Greater Boston men who were reported missing in the burning of an auxiliary and the wreck of a motor boat in Hull Gut was cleared today when the trio returned to their homes after spending the night at the Stony Beach Life Saving Station. The men were Coleman A. King of Dorchester, Leroy Moses of Everett and Guy A. Fisher of Beachmont.

Patrick Flanagan of Roxbury and Joseph Kelly of Newton, who were with the three men in the two boats, had been previously reported rescued by the Hull police after swimming ashore from the burning sailboat.

The first story of their thrilling experiences in a dense fog and other swift currents of Hull Gut was told by the men today. Moses and King were in the motorboat Leona, which was being towed by the sailing craft.

In the latter were Fisher, Flanagan and Kelly. In the fog the men lost their bearings. When the gasoline tank on the auxiliary exploded, Flanagan and Kelly jumped for their lives, while Fisher took refuge in the Leona. After being carried here and there for several hours, the other three men, they reported today, were picked up by a cutter of the battleship Rivadavia and carried to Pemberton.

About the same time news was received of the supposedly fruitless search for the three men, word came from Provincetown that Arthur F. Homer of Quincy, fleet captain of the Boston Yacht Club, had been almost trapped aboard his burning $5,000 power boat Remoh IV, about two miles northeast of the Graves, and after rowing a tender four hours in the fog had been rescued by the crew of the fishing schooner Martha S. Greer.

CROWD CHURCH FOR FUNERAL OF MGR. M'QUAID

St. James' Church on Harrison avenue was crowded today during the solemn services attending the obsequies of the Rt. Rev. Monsignor William P. McQuaid, who was, for more than a quarter of a century, rector of the parish.

Cardinal O'Connell presided at his episcopal throne, having as his chaplains, the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Supple of St. John's Church, Roxbury, and the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Roban of St. Peter's, Dorchester.

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor O'Farrell of the Church of St. Francis de Sales, Roxbury, was celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem.

He was assisted by the Rev. J. J. Fitzgerald of St. James, deacon; the Rev. Robert E. Lee of St. James, sub-deacon. the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Splaine, rector of the Cathedral, master of ceremonies; the Rev. M. J. O'Connor, D. D., of St. James, thurifer; the Rev. Michael Derby of Dorchester and the Rev. M. J. Murphy of Charlestown.

Most Rev. Jer. Nilan, bishop of Hartford, was seated in the sanctuary, as were also the monsignori of the archdiocese, and hundreds of the clergy of New England, including the Rev. Dr. John J. McCoy of St. Anne's, Worcester, and the Rev. Fr. Leary, S. J., vice-president of Holy Cross College.

A large gathering of representative citizens were seated in the reserved pews.

At the close of the low, Rt. Rev. Monsignor Tooling of St. Mary's, Lynn, delivered an affecting eulogy on the life of the departed pastor.

The impressive music of the mass was rendered by the Priest's choir under the leadership of the Rev. Fr. Scanlan of the Cathedral.

Among the societes and organizations lately represented by delegations were the Knights of Columbus, for the degree; Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Holy Na emSociety, Catholic Order of Foresters and the United Irish League of America.

An interesting group of mourners in the church consisted of the members of the Chinese Sunday school class of the cathedral, who were in charge of their director, Rev. J. F. Redican.

Hoop Skirts Will Soon Be in Style

Crinolines, too, Will Be Fashionable, Says Piret of Paris.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—"The American girl can take out her grandmother's hoop skirts and crinolines, for she will need them very shortly," declared Paul Piret of Paris, creator of styles, at the Plaza today.

"Crinolines are now in fashion, and the mincaret gown is very becoming. It took me years to evolve it.

"The old time bustles will not come in again. The hoop effects will take on the appearance of a part of a cornucopia, with the pointed end cut off. They will be broad or small, according to the nature of the person."

THOUSANDS AT FUNERAL OF GAYNOR

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—New York today paid its last tribute to the late Mayor, William J. Gaynor.

The funeral ceremonies, which came to a close this afternoon with interment in Greenwood cemetery, have been the most impressive ever accorded any man in the metropolis of North America. Tens of thousands of men and women, most of them showing traces of sincere grief, lined Broadway and adjacent streets between City Hall and Trinity Church, where the main services were conducted. An overflow was held in St. Paul's church.

Details of mounted police preceded and followed the catafalque as it moved slowly down Broadway. At the head of each of the sixteen horses drawing the hearse marched a policeman or a fireman. There were eight members of the police department and an equal number from the fire department.

Members of police and fire departments carried the casket in the church.

The honorary pallbearers were William H. Taft, former President of the United States; Mayor Adolph Kline of New York; Martin J. Keogh, a justice of the Supreme Court of New York State; Herman Ridder, a newspaper owner; Jacob H. Schiff, multimillionaire banker; Robert Adamson, private secretary to Mayor Gaynor; Rainelander Wado, Commissioner of Police; R. A. C. Smith, James Creelman, Archibald G. Watson, Edward M. Grout and John D. Crimmins.

Just as the services began in Trinity Church the city ceased for one hour its manifold activities as a tribute to the late official. This suspension of business extended to many quarters. An hour's recess was given to the 750,000 school children of the city.

The following was the program of exercises in the church:

Funeral March.....Chopin
Dead March in Saul.....Handel
Funeral Chants.....Felton and Beethoven
Lesson I, Corinthians, XV.....
Creed and verse.....Dykes
Anthem, "Though I Walk".....Barnes
Reading from Twenty-third Psalm.....
Address by Bishop Greer of the Protestant Episcopal Church.
Hymn, "Abide, My God, to Thee".....Mason
The Benediction.....
Burial Anthem.....Croft and Purcell
Hymn, "Lead Kindly Light".....Dykes
Prayers.....
Recessional, "Oh, God, Our Help".....Croft

Various foreign governments were represented at the church, as well as the several branches of the United States government.

Over 200 People Quit Drinking

A Whole Locality Changed by Movements to Eradicate Drink Habit

In St. Jerome, Quebec, it has been learned, over two hundred people, who have been habitual drinkers, have been cured of this frightful curse. This fact came to public notice through W. H. Scott, Postmaster of that place, who has been actively interested in bettering conditions there. Mr. Scott recently made affidavit to the wonderful work done by Renova, the remedy that rescued these two hundred people. Renova is the treatment being adopted by wives and mothers everywhere to save their husbands and sons from drunkards' graves; that enables men to go home with full pay envelopes; and that can be given secretly. A LETTER FROM THE CHILDREN'S HOME

I have 40 or 45 children here at the children's home constantly. When they are weak or run down I always give them Father John's Medicine to build them up. They all gain rapidly under the treatment the medicine affords. Whenever they get cold or have a cough or throat irritation Father John's Medicine gives prompt and sure relief.

Little Stanley Peabody, two years old last February, has been with us since he was two months old. I am sure that his life was saved by Father John's Medicine. It cured him of bronchitis. I gave it to him on the advice of our house physician.

The Criterion of Fashion
Is a Magazine of Dress

It is a fashion magazine, but essentially practical. The most inexpensive dress can be made attractive. There is no excuse for the dowdy. It's all in the knowing how. The essential thing is style, not price. Its appeal is addressed to every woman whatever her income. Its editors and collaborators will seek to solve every problem connected with a woman's personal appearance, not gowns alone but everything from hats to shoes.

It will be authoritative—with information obtainable only in metropolitan centers. It will be comprehensive and appropriate, dealing with selecting, making, wearing and repairing clothes in the broadest sense.

It gives considerable space to the presentation of Ladies' Home Journal Patterns, not because it is a catalog of Ladies' Home Journal Patterns, but because it believes that Ladies' Home Journal Patterns offer the simplest and least expensive solution of the problem of putting style into any kind of dress.

Single Practice for Crimson Hereafter

Studies Will Cut Out One Session But the Work Will Be Much Harder.

By SYDE LYNES.

AS Harvard University opened today for the Fall session, the Crimson football squad will from this time on be held only one period of practice each day on Soldiers Field, as the college rules prohibit morning work, which would naturally conflict with the students' work.

With the work necessarily boiled down into one session in the afternoon, it must needs be harder, and the Harvard football warriors, which they may now be called with perfect safety, will have a stiff siege of work without a letup, until Yale is met and defeated, or—— But Harvard men refuse to admit the existence of any such word.

Several hard, fierce scrimmages are scheduled for the Crimson candidates this week. Some actual playing is essential to the team that will face the University of Maine in the opening game this Saturday, and only with a real tussle with the second team, can the varsity hope to develop any vestige of team work with which to mow down the Pine Tree Staters.

COACHES' PROBLEMS MANY.

A GOOD deal lies before the coaches this week in solving problems. Quarter must be determined before Saturday, although the choice need not be the final one, and of course will not be such, and it has to take the place of Trumbull at guard must be found. Executions must be perfected sufficiently to work smoothly against the openers in the Stadium, and a defence formulated.

The light team from Maine always has a couple of surprises to spring on the Crimson, and despite the handicap of their lack of weight, the quick, snappy backs keep the Crimson defence on the qui vive. Maine does not seem to be particularly strong this year, having defeated Boston College but Saturday by the small score of one lone touchdown. They always let out when they appear in the Stadium, however, and there have been times when the Crimson seemed to be pretty lucky in getting away with a score of 6 to 0. This year should be different, however, and with practically a veteran line and backfield starting the game, Maine should be swept off its feet. A small game like this is an excellent training school and rooting for the new men on the squad, and it will doubtless be used as such.

HARD PRACTICE TODAY.

THE practice today was pretty stiff for the first day of the week, but when the games are occurring on Saturdays, Mondays will be a day of light work for the Crimson, to give the men an opportunity to get back from the exertions and limber up a bit. A scrimmage was expected today, as there is not a great deal of time before Saturday.

Tudor Gardiner, a big tackle, reported today for the first time, as did T. H. Mills, a former crew man. Gardiner was given in charge of Leo Leary, coach of the ends, and will probably be tried out at that position for awhile. He is in fine condition physically, a little too fine if anything, but training table food, which will begin in a couple of days for a regularly chosen squad of men, will add that greatly.

Mills was given over to the coaches of the linemen and put through the various stunts, which are passed out to the unfortunates to help them in their altogether delectable diversion of building weight. The majority of them, are in good shape, however, and will probably not lose much more flesh, the process from this time on being rather a hardening one.

EXPECT CUT IN SQUAD.

A CUT in the squad dividing the men into the varsity and freshman teams is expected sometime this week. And not long after that happens practice will probably be started behind closed doors. At such a time unprofessionals will be stationed on dark corners all around the Stadium with orders to pick off any lurkers. A watch will also be kept for any scouts, from other colleges who may be trying to get a line on what the Crimson attack and defence will be this year. In this connection "Reggie" Brown, former Harvard halfback and one of the most valuable men behind the throne in Harvard football affairs, will be on the job again this year as chief scout, and a great deal of the policy to be followed in the formations of Harvard defence will be based on his reports.

NEW TICKET DISTRIBUTION.

THE new graduate treasurer of the Harvard Athletic Association, Frederick W. Moore, announces a new plan in the distribution of tickets for the Harvard games this year. Tickets for the last four games, namely those with Princeton, Cornell, Brown and Yale in that order, can be had only on application. Graduates and undergraduates can apply for as many as four for the first three games, the application for the Yale game still being restricted to two apiece.

In the case of undergraduates no blanks will be needed for applications for tickets, the students applying for them personally at the Union. For the graduates a method of filling applications, signature and index cards and tickets has been developed which will greatly lessen the possibility of undetected speculation, and at the same time make the clerical work much shorter and simpler than formerly.

In addition a saving of about $1,000 will be made, one thousand being saved in postage on the students, while the remainder will represent a saving in cost of labor in distribution, which was formerly done by a filing system company in Boston.

This year, for the first time, the name and address of the successful applicant for a Yale game ticket will be indelibly stamped across the stub of the ticket, and any attempt to alter or deface this stamp will cause the ticket to be refused at the gate. As usual, both are warned against speculation, any one selling his tickets to games being blacklisted and refused the privilege of applying for tickets at any time in the future.

CANDIDATES BACK.

THE seven candidates for the quarterback position, who spent the week end with Head Coach Percy Haughton at the latter's Summer home near Newport, returned to practice today in first-class condition. They were: Bradlee, Mahan, Freedley, Logan, Watson, Carlmell and Mollus, and were also accompanied by Harry Gardiner, who is coaching the future generals of the Crimson team for several weeks. Bradlee and Mahan, who are the leading signals with several combinations of backs, showed the effect of the instruction they gained on the trip. It will be remembered that these two men have only recently been shifted to the work of the quarters, the method at hand for this position apparently not being up to what Coach Haughton thought it should be.

Both of the men handled themselves very well in the work this afternoon, getting down to the passing centre in better form, and passing the ball accurately to the running back. Prior to the trip they had failed in this, the ball zoom as deeply as it should be done, but they have lost this fault. They also seem to be more certain of themselves when receiving the pigskin from the pivot, and there is now no hesitation in their giving signals.

BRADLEE LIKELY CHOICE

UNDOUBTEDLY one of these two men will lead the team against Maine, and unless something unexpected happens one of them will get the berth for the game. It is not at all unlikely that Bradlee will be the man chosen, as Mahan's work in the freshmen backfield last Fall places him very high in the opinion of the coaches, and would make him a very valuable man for the Crimson running combination.

MEL SHEPPARD'S VICTORY COMES AS A SURPRISE

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

A surprise to the athletic world was the victory of Melvin W. Sheppard of the Irish-American Athletic Club of New York in the one-half mile run at the Metropolitan track and field championships.

Sheppard, the hero of thousands of races, has been on the back slide for many months and had been reported as going virtually "gone back" last year. He has been defeated several times this season by inferior athletics in very slow time. For two months past he has set his mind on winning the Metropolitan half mile championship. At one time he was reported to have said that if he was returned a winner over the field he would be contented and retire.

The former king of middle distance runners has not been in the best of health for some time past and was not expected to defeat Homer Baker, who won the national championship from him at Chicago, in the pouring rain and on a soggy track, the veteran speed marvel came home a winner in the fast time of 1m. 57s. This is as fast as any of the half-mile races that have been run this year.

This is Sheppard's eleventh year on the cinder path as an active competitor in a field where an ordinary athlete lasts about four years with care, yet Sheppard has dead of the head of the list of half and quarter milers for over ten years, meeting and defeating all comers at all distances up to three-quarters of a mile.

James Power, the B. A. A. miler, has received his appointment to the team of athletes that will visit Australia during the coming Winter. He can leave in a few days, as all arrangements have been made. The team does not sail, however, until November 16 from San Francisco, but Power is wanted to compete in a great set of games that will take place on the Coast October 23. He will probably accept this invitation also.

Two Dartmouth Linemen Injured

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 22.—The Dartmouth football squad has met its first setback of the season, as it appears that the team will be without the services of Hinman and W. Rogers, two of the heaviest men on the squad. Dr. John W. Beecher announced that it may be a week before the men, both of whom are suffering from "charley horse," will be able to get into the game again.

Scrimmage is again on the program today, and although the men are feeling pretty fine, it is thought that they will be hardened for more severe work as the week passes.

Everybody in Hanover is jubilant over the prospects of the freshmen. Providing that these men stay in college the class of 1917 will make up for the lack of varsity material available from last year's freshman team.

Nearly one-third of the entire class reported for football and it is believed that this establishes a precedent in Dartmouth athletics.

Emery Wins Race.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—I. J. Emery won the single scull of the Metropolitan Rowing Club over a mile course on the Harlem River. W. H. Hart was second and Frank X. Doering third.

Nelson Refuses to Retire from Ring

"Durable Dane" Is Still Willing to Fight if Offered Proper Inducements.

By JACK CONWAY.

BATTLING NELSON is going to fight again, provided that he can induce some kind hearted promoter to sign him for a bout with one of the members of the lightweight brigade. It is reported that a Milwaukee boxing club is eager to match the "Durable Dane" with Ad Wolgast for a ten-round whirl to take place next month.

Since being the lightweight championship to Wolgast at Point Richmond on February 22, 1910, Nelson has retired from the ring scores of times only to don the padded gloves again whenever the promoter approached him and made a noise like the rustling of hundred dollar bills.

There is no picture in wilderness like the Nelson of today in action. He is merely a good old fighting hog. His frame is battered, his hands are in wretched condition, he is slow on his feet, his judgment of distance is way off and in many ways he is far from being a suitable boxer to engage in a "star" bout.

All that is left of the Nelson that won the championship from Joe Gans is "heart." There never was a more courageous ring man than Oscar Battling Matthew Nelson. He has the heart of a lion and even today, after eighteen years of active service in the squared enclosure, is game to the core and keeps fighting his hardest every second that he is in the ring.

NELSON SHOULD RETIRE.

NELSON'S friends have tried in vain to persuade him to retire to private life. They realize that he is injuring his health by boxing. Dr. Reese, the famous bonesetter, declared recently after examining the former prince of the 133-pounders, that he should be called "Battered" instead of Battling.

When Nelson was in his prime he won his battles chiefly on account of his almost superhuman strength and wonderful gameness. "Battling" was never a classy boxer and would not punch hard but he nevertheless defeated some of the craftiest glove wielders and some of the hardest punchers the lightweight division has produced. He wore down his opponents by his aggressive tactics and bulldog-like fighting spirit.

No matter how hard and how often Nelson was hit, he always kept boring in. He would never fight for a single minute. Consequently he tired out his opponents and caused them to lose confidence in themselves. The result was that the Dane ultimately landed a dream wallop.

"BAT" WORTH $200,000.

NELSON is well fixed financially and is not obliged to fight in order to gain a livelihood. He is worth in the neighborhood of $200,000 which he has got safely invested in real estate. "I fight because I like the ring game," is the way Nelson explains his refusal to retire.

If Wolgast and Nelson meet in Milwaukee it will be a "go-as-you-battle pure and simple. There will be little interest in the bout from a championship standpoint. A large number of "fans," however, are sure to turn out if these former title holders meet.

Nelson has said many harsh things about Wolgast since the latter relieved him of the lightweight title. He has termed him a "cheese champion" and has regarded him as a joke as a real "headliner." Ad will probably recall these things if he ever gets into the same ring with the Hegewisch idol.

REICH STILL HAS CHANCE.

AL REICH, the former amateur heavyweight champion, should not be discouraged because he was bested by Carl Morris in New York the other night. Reich is a young man yet and if handled properly may develop into a good professional boxer.

Reich should never have been pitted against Morris. The match was too one-sided. Morris is not a world's champion but he has gained a wealth of experience during the past two years and a half. The Oklahoma giant is a big, powerful fellow and can give and take a great deal of punishment.

A thousand dollars or so, however, probably looked like a small-sized fortune to Reich and so he consented to clash with Morris. The careers of hundreds of promising boxers are ruined each year by their desire to battle with experienced men before they have mastered the rudiments of the glove game.

BROOKS SWEPT PUNCHER.

PERRY BROOKS will cause a lot of trouble for New England's lightweights this year. Brooks is not a finished boxer but there are few 133-pound boxers who can hit as hard as Tige Waldman's battler. Brooks advances the information that he is willing to meet all-comers.

GALLANT PLANS BOUTS.

WANTS HEAD CHAMPION.

EDDIE MACK has put in an application at the Pugilistic Bureau for a boxer who is as clever as Joe Gagan as rugged and game as Gilbert. Gallant and as good a puncher as Johnny Gallant.

Brown Fears Colby in Opening Game

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 22.—Brown expects a tough opening game from the veteran Colby team coached by Eddie Daly of Dartmouth here Saturday, and Coach Robinson will drive his men hard this week, as practically a new team must be put together.

"Cap" Crowell and Wade look like the ends for the Colby game, as "Buzz" Andrews is still sick in bed. Brown has a pair of big, heavy tackles in Hazard and Bartlett, and there is every expectation that the team will be up to the Brown standard ultimately.

RAIN HOLDS UP DOUBLE BATTLE OF RIVAL SOX

Today the Red Sox begin their last week of the regular season at home. A double-header was slated at the Fenway Park this afternoon with the White Sox as the other end of the attraction, but the heavy rain called for a postponement of the first game, and only a ray of hope of playing the second game. The Chicago team finishes up here tomorrow, and then the Athletics come here for four games on Wednesday and wind up on Saturday.

These seven games will practically decide fourth place. If the Rex Sox take a majority of them they will have no cause to worry.

It is expected that Manager Bill Carrigan will trot out Ray Collins or Hugh Bedient to the firing line this afternoon.

Prominent among the players whom the White Sox landed by draft this season is Shorty Laute of the Worcester team. It was upon the suggestion of Harry Lord that a draft was put in for this youngster.

It was like this: Lord, the last time that the team was in the East, heard much of this youngster. While here he started a little investigation. He went to all of the players in the New England League that he knew, and Lord knows lots of them, for this is the section of the country that he hails from, and asked about Shorten.

Then he reported to Callahan.

Atlas A. A. Completes an All-Star Card

The Atlas A. A. has arranged an all-star show of three 10-round bouts for its next show, which will be held on Thursday night of this week, instead of Tuesday, on account of the primaries. The full program is as follows:

Al McCoy of Brooklyn, N. Y., vs. Noah Beston of Pawtucket, R. I., 10 rounds, welterweight class; Joe Chick of Fall River vs. Young Jasper of Boston, 10 rounds, welterweight class; Al Delmont of Boston vs. Paddy Callahan of Brooklyn, N. Y., 10 rounds, featherweight class.

The principals in each of the above bouts are well known to the fans, Al McCoy has been meeting all the good boys around New York for the past three years.

The match between Joe Chick of Fall River, who is now under the management of Eddie Mack, and Young Jasper of Boston, is bound to appeal to the members who are fond of the bout.

The Al Delmont-Paddy Callahan contest has been hanging fire for over two years on account of a slight difference in the weight. They have finally agreed on 126 pounds at 8 o'clock.

The EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation of any daily newspaper, and over 300,000 more than the largest circulation of any Sunday paper, and over 100,000 more than the Sunday Boston evening papers combined. Circulation books open to all.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 22.—The Pilgrims will play their last game of the season in the West today, when they clash with the Cardinals for the third time.

Although at first it was the intention of Manager Stallings to try out young pitchers in this series, he apparently changed his mind, which shows that he's going after fifth place with hammer and tongs. Today he will toss Dick Rudolph and the Pilgrims should get away with three straight.

Stallings has been a huge success with the Pilgrims. He has shown it on the ball field and by winning yesterday's double-header from the Cardinals has his team in fifth place and it is doubtful if the Dodgers will ever reach the Hub Town hustlers.

Pitchers Great Aid.

The Pilgrims are winning because they are equipped with a clever pitching staff and because they are trying all the time. Further than that, they obey every command of Stallings. They recognize him as the leader and there is no one else on the team who is trying to get his job.

Friction will ruin any team. It ruined the Yankees, Cubs, Tigers and trouble among players probably is the cause of the Cardinals being eighth in the National League race today. There are some players on the Cardinals who do not agree with Miller Huggins' policy in running the club. The result is that Huggins did not get the best from several of the Cardinals this Summer and those players who balked at Huggins are going to be traded this Winter.

Stallings Supreme.

No one disputes Stallings on his signals and the way he maps out the plan of attack. This was shown in a little instance yesterday. Jake Beck came in the fifth inning of the second game, with the Pilgrims in front, 5 to 0. The Cardinals got a man on third with one out. Usually the opposition will allow the run to come in if there is a chance. Jake, the infield was playing back. Captain Bill Sweeney ordered the infield to play back, with Snyder on third. Nelson at the batter, and one out. However, after one pitch by Tyler, Catcher Harden received a signal from Boss Stallings on the bench. The game was stopped for a few seconds. Jake came in and Nelson was run at the plate in case Nelsons tapped to one of the infielders. He didn't, though, and was retired on strikes.

Francis Ouimet's Impressions of British Golfers

Written expressly for the Boston AMERICAN by the open golf champion of the United States.

By FRANCIS OUIMET.

IN my article today I shall give my impressions of British golfers and compare the leading golf stars of England with those in the United States. There are thousands of people in this country, and even more throughout Europe, who believe that the British golfers are far superior to those in Uncle Sam's land.

Personally I fail to agree with those who claim that American golfers are not every bit as good as our friends across the Atlantic. There is very little difference between our ten best golfers and the ten leading stars in Great Britain.

There are ten or more professionals in this country who play remarkable golf. When they are in their best form they are almost unbeatable. I have closely studied the work of the leading American professionals and I firmly believe that they are capable of holding their own with all comers.

The professionals, however, are not the only good golfers in the United States. The amateurs in this country are also sterling players and many of them are able to give a fine account of themselves against the best players in the world. Our amateur players are not quite as good as those in England and Scotland, but they are nevertheless good men.

PICKS TRAVERS AS THE PERFECT GOLFER.

Take for example Jerome D. Travers. This man is a perfect golf wizard. He may always be relied upon to make a good showing. He is a cool, steady player and does not let anything ruffle him.

"Chick" Evans is another great American golfer. He has won first place in many important tournaments, and is sure to be ranked among the "headliners" for many more years.

John G. Anderson and Heinrich Schmidt are two other good American golfers. Schmidt opened the eyes of the British golfing world earlier in the year, when he played in the British championships. It took H. H. Hilton, the best amateur golfer in Europe, to vanquish the gallant Worcester lad.

With such stars as those mentioned above competing for Old Glory in the big tournaments, I am sure that the American public will never have reason to be ashamed of the work of their players.

BRITISH GOLFERS HIGH CLASS PLAYERS.

The golf displayed by the British golfers was of a very high class. They showed to very good advantage throughout the tournament with the possible exception of the last few holes in Saturday's playoff, when Mr. Vardon and Mr. Ray made several serious mistakes at the crucial stage of the round.

They show a great knowledge of the various shots, such as a shice, pull, pitch shot with run, and the cut shot. This latter shot is very effective, and is used mostly to keep the ball near the hole, especially a keen green.

When played properly, it leaves little to do on the putting greens.

Their putting is fairly good on the whole, with the possible exception of Harry Vardon. He is lamentably weak in this department of the game and shows a timidness on short putts, such as I have never seen before. He hits the ball with a quick, jerky stroke and is constantly afraid of missing the hole. It does seem too bad, because this really great golfer suffers on this shot.

Ray, Ray it is different. A big, strapping chap, who hits the ball hard, getting terrific distances. The few times I have seen him play made me think that Ray was inclined to be off the line of play occasionally.

His play is very sound for all of that, and he might be considered a very dangerous man on the putting greens, as he putts boldly and for the back of the cup, being exceptionally accurate on his approach putting.

VARDON AND RAY MAKE THOUSANDS AT GOLF

It is a much mooted question just what the big professional golfers get for playing their favorite game. That they are highly rewarded—some of them richly so—is certain. While recognized as a gentleman's sport, it has many sides that may be turned to profit and remarkable incomes are being made from golf.

Edward Ray, who was one of the great trio Saturday in the triple tie play-off, remarked that even though he finished third he had made $800 in last week's tournament at Brookline.

As it was generally known that he had made those $200 ball players look like wooden soldiers when he was in the line for the title of this country, but he refused to give up the ball used by the Massachusetts amateur champion in his State, national and open golf this year. It was the same ball that Tom McNamara won the Metropolitan open and Massachusetts open with in two consecutive years, and the latter player is the golf salesman of a firm manufacturing many kinds of balls there would be only the "best ball" reason for playing it in the instance mentioned.

Take Advantage of Opportunities.

Professionals would be foolish not to take advantage of opportunities to pick up money this way as well as setting a figure on their play in professional matches. The demand for Ray and Vardon endorsements may not be as numerous as would have been the case had they won for first and second money at the head of the best American field ever assembled would have made them wonderful drawing cards.

Estimates from $5,000 to $25,000 are spoken of in everyday conversation of what the Englishmen may pick up by their play in this country. Golf is here to stay, Vardon won every match but one that he played in this country, including the open championship in 1900, and why shouldn't wealthy clubs and extravagant golfing committees pay well to see world's champions in action.

It was reported that the National course, whose nucleus for membership is made up of fifty millionaires, refused to put up a purse of $4000 for an exhibition, but the Englishmen didn't care, for they had a lady price during their best days at the sidewalk thousands changed hands but aggregated nearly treble what the first price offered for winning the championship was for if Francis Ouimet were a professional he could collect but $2000 cash instead of receiving plate.

It has been known that certain golf ball manufacturers would pay large sums of money to have a champion use their ball, and as this avenue of revenue is open and above board it is little wonder that professionals will play the ball that big the biggest bonus attached to it, rather than the one they like best.

McDermott was approached by several firms when he was in the line for the title of this country, but he refused to give up the ball used by the Massachusetts amateur champion in his State, national and open golf this year. It was the same ball that Tom McNamara won the Metropolitan open and Massachusetts open with in two consecutive years, and the latter player is the golf salesman of a firm manufacturing many kinds of balls there would be only the "best ball" reason for playing it in the instance mentioned.

Joe Connolly Out for Rest of Season

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 22.—It is doubtful if Joe Connolly, the Pilgrims' left fielder, will be able to get back into the game again this season. Connolly is on crutches with his broken leg, which he received sliding into second base in the first game of the double-header against the Cardinals. His shin is in splints.

exhibition dates scheduled ahead that they could fill.

Britons to Play at Chicago.

Chicago is to have a glimpse of the notables when "Chick" Evans and Warren K. Wood, past and present Western amateur champions, will play a foursome with them.

Naturally the amateurs are not going to try and get any money, it would end their amateur rating, and it is also a cinch that the Englishmen are not going to go to Chicago, don't Scotia, and all over the lot for their health.

There were many bets made at the Country Club Saturday, one of the best being a 10 to 1 shot that Tom Stevenson took for $100, thereby winning a thousand dollars by Ouimet's fine play.

The chances of the amateur against two veterans, where he was sandwiched in, and the odds more than two to one against him, makes the result appear all the more remarkable. The fact was that many of such rash betting and odds from 12 to 1 up to 40 to 1 were heard on all

"Be Daffy; Get Married" Fisher's Fame Receipt

By OTHEMAN STEVENS.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 22.—"Will you find Mr. Bud Fisher for me?" I asked of a bellhop in the Hotel Alexandria lobby, handing him a card.

There were a score of boys at my beck-in a minute, reaching for that card.

Which is greatness, or a loose purse, or both.

Everyone in the lobby knew Mr. Fisher.

A noble looking traveling man nudged me and pointed toward the telephone booth. "That's him smoking room grammar over there," he said, and I followed the plunging current of bellhops and found Mr. Fisher to be quite human, very amiable and accompanied by a very lovely Mrs. Fisher.

"He's not as cute as Mutt," muttered the traveling man as we passed, "but he is just as wise as Jeff."

"What's the secret about becoming great, Mr. Fisher?" I asked.

"I have come to the knowledge by observing great men," he replied jocularly. "If you want to start a correspondence school, I'll give you the prescriptions.

"One is to marry, and marry the right girl.

"I've done that, Mrs. Fisher, Mr. Stevens," and I saw that he did.

"Great to Be Crazy."

"The second, and this is as Mr. Jeff would say, a sine qua non, is to be daffy and don't care, and let everyone know of it.

"Editors would not have my work at first, but I kept on insisting that it was just what I knew it was; some editors said I was nutty, and then I knew I had one; being naturally enthusiastically nutted, it was trying work for me to arrive; against my inner conclusions, I had to fight my own sense and judgment and insist that my work was great.

"And just at the exact moment demanded by the psychology of success, a man who hated me made me.

"He was just as crazy about me as I was about myself—but in a different way.

"I had been doing the graft trial in San Francisco, and had taken the seventeen characters involved and caricatured them; I had been using Mutt, and I pulled Jeff in out of a crazy house, and made him sympathize with the others in the trial; on the ground they were as dotty as he.

"Burns I had as Taboose, Spreckels as Pickels, Judge Dunn as Just Finished, and so on, with Heney as Brandy.

"Heney has a good, legal mind, but he seemed to miss the points of those cartoons, and didn't like them; he gave a lecture at the university one day, and denounced me; 'Bud Fisher' and his nefarious work; I had heard my work condemned by every other name, but nefarious was a new one and sounded like positive-ly the last patter.

"Anyone the day before no one knew Bud Fisher, but when that Heney oration against me was published—well, I had been having a seven-column strip two inches deep, and after that I was given orders to go as deep as I liked, and, if necessary, the accommodating foreman would hand the forms to get my pictures in.

Had to Obey Wife.

"Why, am I here? Why ask? Mrs. Fisher wanted to come; I suggested Paris, and she said Los Angeles, so I reflected and gave the matter due consideration, and finally I decided it was best to come to Los Angeles."

Mrs. Fisher is a charming young woman of fascination, both of person and personality.

"I have been hearing about Los Angeles all my life," she explained, "and didn't hesitate a minute in deciding to come here; I've never been to Europe, not Paris, with its frocks and Rathskellers, not France, not Italy, not even when I thought of the beautiful things I had heard of this city."

"You talk like a prima donna," I explained; "that is just the way Patti, Mary Garden, Melba, all have talked about Los Angeles."

"There is only one reason why I assume that I have some notoriety," continued Mr. Fisher, "and that is because some sort of a short card fellow has been impersonating me all over this country; I get bills for motor car rides from Sandusky to Raleigh once I received a peremptory demand to pay a bill for a banquet this fellow had given—and in Brooklyn!

"He's an amorous chap, as well; I get barrels of letters from girls he has courted, which is very annoying; recently he seems to have been here, for there is a young woman who lives on Wall street, who has been writing most despairing letters because he doesn't call any more.

"Good work, Mr. Fisher," I slipped in, "that sort of stuff leaves a lot of alibis waiting to be used."

And I looked at the two of them, bless me if they weren't holding hands and smiling at each other, and it made me ashamed of the stupid jest; it was like trying sophisticated joshing on a pair of lyrical violets.

"Last time I heard of you, Stevens, you were down in Mexico; I believe I put Mutt and Jeff down there at Juarez about that time," said Fisher.

Fisher Is Real Modest.

"You did, and you put a fine across the pair. 'Otheman Stevens has nothing on Mutt and Jeff,'" I told him; "the only reason it didn't get me thrown into the corral was that the Jefs mistook Chris Hagerty of the A. P. for me, and had jailed him as a spy. Hagerty always spent more money than I did, so they thought he was the Hearst paper man.

"I laboriously explained how an A. P. man could not be accused of spying anything, and after I had bought cigarettes for the 'army' Hagerty was released in time for us both to witness the 'Battle of the Sundter,' and see the entire carnage of two mules being shot.

Mr. Fisher is really modest, but probably he feels just about that way.

He is so modest that he will not believe he is notable, but he is seriously carrying a coupon for a fauteuil in the front row of the Hall of Fame; a man who can keep the world laughing heartily and healthy for a year after year, is the one great philanthropist.

Swart at End on Princeton Eleven

PRINCETON, Sept. 22.—Some good material for the 'varsity has appeared in the Tiger football camp during the past week of practice. The material from the freshman team of last year is excellent, and the scrub team of 1912 has also produced several good men, including the "transfers" not eligible last year.

The sophomore team Coach Andrews has tried out with the regulars are Heiniger at left guard, Brown, Shea and Glick at end, Law at half and Scammon at centre. The last named is practically due for the varsity berth in the pivot position, as I. Scott of Cambridge, Rhedhenthan's sub last year, has been shifted to end by the coaches. Law is another yearling who has put up a good game of football, in spite of being extremely light. Heiniger has plenty of weight, being the tallest and one of the heaviest men on the squad.

Coy Is Rutgers Coach.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 22.—Ted Coy, the former Yale captain, is expected here this week to help coach the Rutgers football team. Bonnes, the Rutgers new trainer, has arrived. He assisted the trainer at Yale last year.

Sullivan Discusses English Athletics

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Discussing the report that Great Britain would not be represented at the Olympic games in Berlin in 1916, James E. Sullivan, the American olympic commissioner, who has just returned from a trip abroad, declared that England is being placed in a bad light by a clique which is trying to create sentiment against the games.

"England has the material to make a good showing, but she lacks organization," said Sullivan. "In my opinion England will brace up and endeavor to regain the enviable position which she held twenty-five years ago."

Former Stars Will Aid Yale Coaches

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22.—In response to a summons by Captain Ketcham three former Yale stars have sent word that they will join the coaching squad today. They are Fred Daly, captain three years ago, now head coach at Williams; John Kilpatrick, the former end, and Jack Field, head coach two years ago. Captain Ketcham announces that the work would be light till after the Wesleyan game.

Beckett, substitute half-back, will be kept out of the game this week with a sprained ankle. Harrison and Cornell will leave the hospital this week, but Pumpelly will be kept from practice for nearly two weeks by his injured knee.

Lowell and Hartford 4th Game Postponed

HARTFORD, Ct., Sept. 22.—The fourth game of post season series between Hartford and Lowell, New England championship of New England, which was to have been played this afternoon, was postponed on account of the wet grounds. It has been raining here all night. If conditions permit, the game will be played here tomorrow.

Plan McFarland-Murphy Go.

CANTON, O., Sept. 22.—Secretary Bloxsom of Fisher's McFarland-Murphy camp said Eddie Murphy will meet Ted [illegible] on October 12.

MANAGER SAYS 'GUNBOAT' WILL WHIP LANGFORD

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—There is no reason without even the slightest doubt why Sam Langford will not defeat Joe Jeannette in their scheduled ten round bout at the Fairmont A. C. in Jersey City, Thursday night, according to Sam McVey, Jim Flynn, Harry Lewis and others who have been in the habit of boxing.

It is the opinion of many that the "gunboat" is taking on a rather large order in the Boston negro. Langford's form now is far more formidable than it was when he defeated Jeannette in a fifteen round battle on August 15th. Langford has since that time had a number of hard battles with heavy men and he has been going through the hardest kind of training for the battle.

I understand Smith could not get Langford anywhere he wanted to go decisively. Langford is willing to go to Jersey City and box a greater fighter than Jeannette. Sam McVey, Jim Flynn, Harry Lewis and others he has been in the habit of beating

THE KING OF DIAMONDS

BY LOUIS TRACY

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

You Can Begin This Great Story Today by Reading This First

PHILIP ANSON is a boy of fifteen, of fine education and good breeding, but an orphan and miserably poor.

The story opens with the death of his mother.

Rich relatives have deserted the family in their hour of need, and when his mother's death comes Philip is in despair. He looks over his mother's letters and finds that he is related to Sir Philip Moreland. A few days later a terrific thunderstorm breaks over London. At the height of the storm a flash of lightning scares a team attached to a coach standing in front of a West End mansion. Philip, who has become a newsboy, rescues a girl from the carriage just before it turns over. A man with the girl tries over Philip in his excitement. He cuffs the boy and calls a policeman. The girl pleads for Philip, and he is allowed to go after learning that the man was Lord Vanstone. Philip then determines to commit suicide. He borrows a piece of rope from O'Brien, a ship chandler, and goes to his miserable dwelling in Johnson's Mews.

Now Read On

He stopped and kissed the pillow, nestling his face against it, as he was wont to fondle the dear face that rested there so many weary days. Then he resolutely turned away, descended four steps of the ladder-like stairs, and tied the clothesline to a hook which had been driven into the ceiling during the harness-room period of the room beneath. With equal deliberation he knotted the other end of the cord around his neck, and he calculated that by springing from the stairs he would receive sufficient shock to become insensible very quickly, while his feet would dangle several inches above the floor.

THE METEOR

There was a terrible coolness, a settled fixity of purpose far beyond his years, in the manner of these final preparations. At last they were completed. He blew out the candle and stood erect.

At that instant the room became resplendently flooded with lightning, not in a single vivid flash, but in a trembling, continuous glare, that suggested the effort of some luminous constellation, fierce with electric energy. Before his eyes was exhibited a startling panorama of the familiar objects of his lonely abode. The brightness, so sustained and tremulous, startled him back from the very brink of death.

"I will wait," he said. "When the thunder comes I will jump."

Even as the thought formed in his mind, a ball of fire—so glowing, so iridescent in its flaming heat that it dominated the electric waves fluttering in the overburdened air—darted past the little window that looked out over the tiny yard in the rear of the house and crashed through the flagstones with the din of a ten-inch shell.

Philip, elevated on the stairway, distinctly saw the molten splash which accompanied its impact. He saw the heavy stones riven asunder as if they were tissue paper, and, from the hole caused by the thunderbolt, or meteor, came a radiance that sent a spreading shaft of light upward like the beam of a searchlight. The warmth, too, of the object was almost overpowering. Were not the surrounding walls constructed of stone and brick there must have been an immediate outbreak of fire. As it was the glass in the windows cracked, and the woodwork began to scorch. In the same instant a dreadful roll of thunder swept over the locality, and a deluge of rain, without any further warning, descended.

All this seemed to the wondering boy to be a very long time in passing. In reality it occupied but a very few seconds. People in the distant street could not distinguish the crash of the fallen meteor from the accompanying thunder, and the downpour of rain came in the very nick of time to prevent the wood in the house and the neighboring factories from blazing forth into a disastrous fire.

The torrent of water caused a dense volume of steam to generate in the back yard, and this helped to minimise the strange light shooting up from the cavity. There was a mad hissing and crackling as the rain poured over the meteor and gradually dulled its brightness. Tantalizing demonium raged in that curiously secluded nook.

Amazed and cowed—not by the natural phenomena he had witnessed, but by the interpretation he placed on it—the boy unfastened the rope from his neck.

"Very well, mother," he whispered, aloud. "If it is your wish I will live. I suppose that God speaks in this way.

What the Meteor Contained

PHILIP descended the stairs. He was choking now from another cause than strangulation. The steam pouring in through the fractured window panes was stifling. He took off his coat, first removing from an inner pocket the bundle of letters found under Mrs. Anson's pillow, and carefully stuffed the worn garment into the largest cavities. By this means he succeeded somewhat in shutting out the vapor, as well as the lurid light that still flared red in the back yard.

The lightning had ceased totally, and the improvised blind plunged the room into impenetrable darkness. He felt his way to the stairs and found the candle, which he relighted. The rain beating on the roofs and on the outer pavements combined with the weird sounds in the inclosed yard to make a terrifying racket, but it was not likely that a youth who attributed his escape from a loathsome death, self-inflicted, to the direct interposition of Providence in his behalf would yield to any sentimental fears on that account. Indeed, although quite weak from hunger, he felt an unaccountable elation of spirits, a newborn desire to live and justify his mother's confidence in him, a sense of power to achieve that which hitherto seemed impossible.

He even broke into a desultory whistling as he bent over the hearth and resumed the laying of the fire abandoned five minutes earlier with such sudden soul-weariness. The candle, too, burned with cheery glimmer, as if pleased with the disappearance of its formidable competitor. Fortunately, he had some coal in the house—his chief supply was stored in a small bin at the other side of the yard, beyond the burial place of the rag-picker's meteor, and consequently quite unapproachable.

Soon the fire burned merrily, and the coffee still keeper's recipe for using coffee grounds was put into practice. Philip had neither sugar of milk, but the hot liquid smelled well, and he was now so cold and stiff and he had such an empty sensation where he might have worn a belt that some crusts of bread, softened by immersion in the dark compound, earned keener appreciation than was ever given in later days to the most costly dishes of famous restaurants yet unbuilt.

After he had eaten he dried his damp garments and changed his soaked boots for a pair so worn that they scarcely held together. But their dryness was comforting. An added feeling of contentment, largely induced by the heat of the grateful fire, rendered his actions the greater part of an hour elapsed leisurely. Quite half an hour elapsed before he thought of peeping through the back window, to ascertain the progress of external events. The rain was not now pelting down with abnormal fury. It was still falling, but with the quiet persistence that marks—in London parlance—"a genuine wet day." The steam had almost vanished.

When he removed his coat from the broken pane he saw with surprise that the dazzlement in the yard were dry within a circle of two feet around the hole made by the meteor. Such drops as fell within that area were instantly obliterated, and tiny jets of vapor from the hole itself betrayed the presence of the fiery object beneath. His boyish curiosity being thoroughly aroused, he drew an old sack over his head and shoulders, unlocked a door which led into the yard from a tiny scullery, and cautiously approached the place where the meteor had plowed its way into the ground. The stones were littered with debris, but the velocity of the heavy mass had been so great that a comparatively clean cut was made through the pavement. The air was warm, with the hot breath of an oven, and it was as much as Philip could bear when he stood on the brink of the hole and peeped in.

At a good depth, at nearly half his own height he estimated, he saw a round ball firmly imbedded in the earth. It was dully red, with its surface all cracks and fissures, as the result of the water poured onto it. Much larger than a football, it seemed to him, at first sight, to be the angry eye of some colossal demon glaring up at him from a dark socket. But the boy was absolutely a stranger to fear.

He procured the handle of a mop and prodded the meteor with it. The surface felt hard and brittle. Large sections broke away, though they did not crumble, and he received a sharp reminder of the potency of the heat still stored below when the wood burst into sudden flame.

This ended his investigations for the night. He used the sacking to block up the window, replenished the fire, set his coat to dry, and dragged his mattress from the bedroom to the front of the fire. The warmth within and without the house had made him intolerably drowsy, and he fell asleep while murmuring his prayers, a practice abandoned since the hour of his mother's death.

In reality, Philip was undergoing a novel sort of Turkish bath, and the perspiration induced thereby probably saved him from a dangerous cold. He slept long and soundly. There was no need to attend to the fire. Long ere the coal in the grate was exhausted, the presence of the meteor had penetrated the surrounding earth, and the house was far above its normal temperature when he awoke.

STRANGE OBJECTS

The sun had risen in a cloudless sky. A lovely Spring morning had succeeded a night of gloom and disaster, and the first sound that greeted his wondering ears was the twittering of the busy sparrows on the housetops. Of course, he owned neither clock nor watch. These articles, with many others, were represented by a bundle of pawn tickets stuffed into one of the envelopes of his mother's packet of letters. But the experience of even a few weeks had taught him roughly how to estimate time by the sun, and he guessed the hour to be 8 o'clock, or thereabouts.

His first thought was of the meteor. His toilet was that of primeval man, being a mere matter of rising and stretching his stiff limbs. While lacing his boots he noticed that the floor was littered with tiny white specks, the largest of which was not bigger than a grain of bird seed. These were the particles which shot through the broken window during the previous night. He picked up a few and examined them. They were hard, angular, cold to the touch, and a dull white in color.

On entering the yard he saw hundreds of these queer little rough pebbles, many of them as large as peas, some the size of marbles and a few bigger ones. They had evidently flown on all sides, but, encountering lofty walls, save where they forced a way through the thin glass of the window, had fallen back to the ground. Interspersed with them he found pieces of broken stone and jagged lumps of material that looked and felt like iron, poor and common.

Gryce Redeems Himself.

WHAT is this? Have we not left Mrs. Olney's and have we not returned to Dr. Cameron's house and entered Mrs. Cameron's room? Yes, but something has occurred here—changes have taken place, unaccountable changes in one who has not the clew to the situation. For while the walls, the ceiling, the fireplace and doors are those we have been accustomed to see in Mrs. Cameron's apartment, the carpet which has been laid between the window and the bed, the curtains which shut off the light and make a semi-darkness in the room, even the bed with its coverlets and pillows are not only different from those in use here before, but are so strangely out of keeping with the general furnishing of this house of dainty appointments that we are dazed and do not know what to make of it till we suddenly recognize a picture that has displaced an exquisite Madonna on the wall opposite the bed, and perceive that we have slid the surroundings and almost the look of that room in Mrs. Olney's house which we have been told was the one which had formerly held Mrs. Farley and her daughter.

The illusion is so complete, owing to the use of a screen which has been placed at the side of the bed in a way to cut off a view of the fireplace and such portions of the room as were out of harmony with this idea, that we are not at all astonished to see Mildred's little stand, with her favorite books and knickknacks upon it, and close by, with her plain, benevolent face turned toward the silent form still stretched in its old quietude on the changed bed, the figure of Mrs. Olney herself, gazing with watchful eye and eager interest at the countenance which to all glances but her own looks out of place upon these coarse pillows, and quid belongings so

For in the dimness made by the curtains and the fast-approaching nightfall, two other forms can be faintly seen waiting, as all things in the world seem to wait at such a moment, for the renewed stir in those quiescent limbs and fallen eyelids, which would tell of life returned to this long unconscious body. They were those of Dr. Cameron and Mr. Gryce, and it would be hard to tell which in one who has not the clew to the situation. For while the walls, the ceiling, the fireplace and doors are those we have been accustomed to see in Mrs. Cameron's apartment, the carpet which has been laid between the window and the bed, the curtains which shut off the light and make a semi-darkness in the room, even the bed with its coverlets and pillows are not only different from those in use here before, but are so strangely out of keeping with the general furnishing of this house of dainty appointments that we are dazed and do not know what to make of it till we suddenly recognize a picture that has displaced an exquisite Madonna on the wall opposite the bed, and perceive that we have slid the surroundings and almost the look of that room in Mrs. Olney's house which we have been told was the one which had formerly held Mrs. Farley and her daughter.

The illusion is so complete, owing to the use of a screen which has been placed at the side of the bed in a way to cut off a view of the fireplace and such portions of the room as were out of harmony with this idea, that we are not at all astonished to see Mildred's little stand, with her favorite books and knickknacks upon it, and close by, with her plain, benevolent face turned toward the silent form still stretched in its old quietude on the changed bed, the figure of Mrs. Olney herself, gazing with watchful eye and eager interest at the countenance which to all glances but her own looks out of place upon these coarse pillows, and quid belongings so poor and common.

"Mildred!" came in a soft, lingering note from the bed; then two dark eyes suddenly unclosed, and fixing themselves upon the face bent over them, slowly smiled as much as to say, "I am here." But in another instant a shudder went through that exhausted frame and those two eyes, wild now, and unutterably searching, flew from object to object about her, then back to Mrs. Olney, who, perfect in her lesson, gave her an affectionate look, and remarked quietly, "You have been ill, dear, very ill."

CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

It is cruel to force nauseating, harsh physic into a sick child.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels, sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Do You Know That—

According to official statistics recently compiled in Germany, the number of centenarians in Europe is far greater than is generally imagined. Spain possesses 410, France 213, Italy 197, Great Britain 92, Russia 89, Germany 76, Norway 28, Sweden 10, Belgium 5 and Denmark 2. Switzerland has none. The Balkan States hold the record. In Bulgaria alone there are no fewer than 3,883 centenarians, and there are another 1,074 in Roumania and 573 in Servia.

On his first opportunity he took it to Chicago to have it appraised and was astonished when he was told it was worth over $10,000.

Her Cousin and Her Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My husband has always been devoted to me, but now a cousin of mine has come to live near us, and she is one of those flattering kind: she never sees my husband without having something to say about how nice he looks or how smart she heard he was, and the other day, right before me, she said: "I certainly am proud of my handsome cousin." And I didn't know which way to look, such talk makes me feel so foolish. The worst of it is my husband acts as if he liked it, and I know he likes her, and he told me yesterday that he wished I'd study to be as pleasant as my cousin. I am heart broken. What shall I do? SAD WIFE.

HEART broken, you with such an easy problem as that to solve?

Well, my dear, pick up the pieces of that heart of yours, no matter how far away they flew when they broke, and mend your heart right up again, this very day. Of course, he likes to be flattered. Who doesn't, pray tell?

And he is good looking and clever, too. Well, don't let any other woman tell him of either of these two facts more often than you do. Handsome, is he, and she's proud of her good-looking cousin? Well, I'd be proud of my good-looking husband and I'd say so, too. Why didn't you say, "Cousin, I'm glad you appreciate my John. I'm so proud of him myself, sometimes I'm afraid I'm foolish." And you'd have seen John's eyes light up, and John would have looked at you and not at cousin at all.

One of the flattering kind is she? Well, it'd be so much more flattering than she could ever hope to be that she wouldn't know which way to turn.

BE'S ALL RIGHT

Your John is all right. Just tell him so over and over again, three times a day if necessary, and don't let any little pussyat of a cousin take him away from you right before your very eyes because she can be more agreeable to him than you can.

Was there anything in the wedding ceremony that told you to stop saying nice things to John the minute the wedding ring began to be a bit tight on your chubby little finger? Tell him see plainly enough that you thought him handsome and clever-witted and courageous and honest, too, didn't you? Well, why not go on in the same way?

What won a man will keep him nine times out of ten.

Were you smiling and pretty and light-hearted before you married John? Well, that's what he chose you for. Keep that way or how can you blame him for looking quite steadily at a cousin who appears to be somewhat that sort of girl herself?

Get away from cousin? Dread to see her coming. Cry when she's gone, scold John about her? Dear, dear, what a foolish little woman to be sure!

THE ONLY WAY

Here she is at the house— here before morning, noon and night. Get her to flatter John before visitors, smile indulgently at some of her most obvious faults, refer to her, now quite often, as men, of women, of books, of goods, make John think you think cousin is the greatest human being alive. Some time when you know John is going to be really tired ask cousin home to dinner, be busy about the house when she comes and send cousin in to entertain her; don't help him out, make him set up and look pleasant though he's dying for a pipe and his easy coat, have cousin stay late; the sleepier John gets the better for you; make John take her home, way home, not just to the car; insist upon it, and when John comes home be so glad to see him and tell him you hated to send him away with cousin, but she always expected men to wait on her and she might think, etc. Give John cousin for breakfast, dinner and supper, and smile and smile and be more than ever cousin dared to be, and watch results; you'll see, you'll see. Men are grown up boys, you know, just grown up boys, after all; see if John doesn't turn out to be one, in the case of cousin.

And "Nuts" Eat 'Em

"Now," asked the teacher, "who can tell me what an oyster is?"

Silence for a moment, while small brows were knit in strained effort at remembrance. Then little Tommy's facial muscles relaxed and eagerly he raised his hand.

"I know!" he triumphantly announced. "An oyster is a fish built like a nut."

Advice to the Superstitious

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service

"Always look at the moon over your right shoulder"

BILLY, whispering into Betty's ear under the September moon (and it's the last moon they'll see out of doors): "There are a few things that you really ought to watch—little superstitious, you know. Such as—see now—there's a new, thin moon, silvery as your hair was when you were a little fellow. Always look at it over your right shoulder. Turn your head—a little more—.

"Always make a wish at a shooting star"

I don't need to look at it; I've seen it already. Tip your chin up—and you'll have good luck! CAN YOU SEE THE MOON?

"Always make a wish at a shooting star! You've got to be quick there, little chap! A shooting star falls like a bright hope. You never have time to make a noise. Just watch its flight—like a match flipped from the hand of a man with a cigarette. Watch it hard with your blue eyes, and wish if you can——. Is THAT what you wished for?

"See a pin and pick it up—all the day you'll have good luck"

"See a pin and pick it up, all the day you'll have good luck"

Even if it's on the steps of a trolley and we hold up the whole system, stop to pick up a pin, small person! Drop on your knees—so your hand and mine grope for the pin. It's a pretty small pin, isn't it? Look at me till the time—that's the right way to play it. Your eyes are close, little fellow, and they're awfully blue! Your lips are close, and they're red as a pomegranate blossom—oh, LEAVE the pin, there!

"Oh, I say—none of those things are any good unless I'm around!"

Little Bobbie's Pa

SKOOL has begun again & I have a new teecher. Her name is Miss McCabe & she is awful pritty. Last year our teecher was big & homely & she disliked me, for I broke my collar bone a coopel times & she said I done it a purpus, but I didn't, it was all an akcident, for I was going to like her very much.

This is what Bobbie, our Pa, thinks always nicky was I was a child. All of my teachers was pritty & I always liked them & they liked me for I was a nice & loveing gale, even tho freckled.

I told Miss McCabe all about Pa & Bobbie could see right off that Pa was the softest boy in the skool & that was so he got his report card he was always good in everything except spelling & rithmetic & was usually head on them.

Well, well, Pa, on his experiment isent so very bad. If everybody in this world was to get real good there wud be a lot of long eared wimmin for the preechers & men dubbed in their heads much then.

You always have sum excuse & wiggel out, doant you, sed Ma. Well, as long as you are a good husband I doant care whether you are a good man or not. What are your studdies going to be this year, Bobbie?

I told Ma I was going to study history for the first time.

Your in a grand stubby, history, sed I was always glad to see sum 1 in history. It is awful fascinating, Pa sed, to turn back & see the dusty pages of history & read about all them old knaggers. Watta-tell you get to stumbling all anent them old Greeks, Bobbie, sed Pa, & how they fought for there freedom with the Kuglish & the cimes.

The Greeks never fought with the Gauls & English, sed Ma. The Romans fought with the Gauls, & I believe the Yankees fought a litel with the Kuglish. You are getting awful rusty on yore history Ma sed.

I wish you wuddent try to correck me on my history sed Pa. In the history book that I studied the Greeks fought the English & they fought the Gauls in the Wars of the Roses. It was the best history book that money cud by, too, sed Pa. Why sed Pa doant you remember how the old timey boy general named Eleazer led to the Gaul general named Bob Lee & the old Gaurk dies but never surrenders.

That was a French general sed that, sed Napoleons nevers, sed Ma.

I will ask Miss McCabe tomorrow. I wuld like a Ma I dident want to see them having a argument beekans that and one argument at the breakfast tabel is one argument a day is enuff for any married cerpul.

Well, Bobbie, sed Pa, we will keep it to very pritty teecher. Maybe I best let go along too, sed Pa.

Maybe I will, sed Ma, if the conference also and Ma. But I know beefour we get near you are all mixed up. You decided on Bobbie's name with a big mess of that nonsense. You doant even remember whether Bobbie was born in bed, Ma. Why try to reminember as far back as the grooked?

Don't a battle! sed Pa. Of course I remember it. Him & Teddy Roosevelt whipped all the Spaniards. Mister Roosevelt is himself.

All He Asked

The young man and the girl were standing outside the front door having a final chat after his wooing call. He was telling against the time when he should come. Presently the young lady seemed found to discover she failed to use the way, clad in a dressing gown.

Why, father, what in the world is the matter?

Nothing, said her parent, "you know I've never complained about your staying late, but I'm getting tired of it. I've told you now, but for goodness sake stop leaning against the bell-push, and let the rest of the family get some sleep."

Their Married Life

When They Reach London Warren Prescribes for Helen a "Good Square Meal"

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

IT was after 7 o'clock when the train drew in under the great arched dome of Victoria Station. Helen stepped out on the platform, bewildered by the hurrying crowd, the noise, the smoke and the confusion.

Still sick and dizzy from the rough Channel trip, her one desire was to get to a hotel and to bed. As they were to be in London only over night, Warren had decided that they might as well go to the Grosvenor, which was opposite the station, and would mean less dragging around of themselves and luggage.

"No, I want a hotel porter," said Warren waved aside several railroad porters who rushed up for their baggage.

"Here you are, sir," a man with "Hotel Grosvenor" on his cap picked up their suit-cases and led the way through the great crowded station.

As they entered the vaulted lobby of the Grosvenor, Helen was instantly impressed with the dignity and spaciousness of the place, and the air of rather gloomy grandeur, typical of the older London hotel.

"This is one of the Gordon houses," commented Warren with a critical glance around. "Ought to be pretty good."

"Any trunks, sir," asked the porter. "If you give me your checks I'll get them passed by the customs and brought right up to your room."

"Wait till I see about a room," said Warren strode over to the desk, while Helen, feeling that she could not keep up much longer, sank into one of the massive leather chairs.

"It's all right," as he came toward her followed by a boy with a jangling key. "We can't get a bath, but we've got a good-sized room. Jove, it seems good to be in a country where you can speak the language."

A TYPICAL ROOM

Up the lift, down through the long, wide hall with its heavy red carpet, and the boy unlocked the door of "141 A."

It was a typical London hotel room, very big, high-ceilinged and gloomy. There was the inevitable two marble-topped wash stands, side by side, and the furniture was of the heavy black walnut and red plush period.

"I'll have your trunks right up, sir," said the porter, as he put down their hand-baggage and hurried out.

As the door closed after him Helen threw herself across the foot of the bed. She had taken off her hat, but not her coat or gloves. Her pallor and limp exhaustion showed her complete exhaustion.

"Got no time to lie there," frowned Warren, as he opened up his suit case, took out his brushes and a fresh collar. "We've got to wash us and get some dinner. It's almost eight now."

"Oh, I don't want any dinner—I couldn't eat a thing," moaned Helen, "I just want to go to bed."

"Nonsense, you haven't had anything to eat since breakfast. What you want is a square meal. We'll go down to Simpson's and get some good plain English food—none of your French 'a la' but a good thick grilled chop and a bottle of stout. That'll set you up all right."

"Oh, dear, I couldn't!" weakly pulling off her gloves. "I COULDN'T go out of here again tonight! You can go, and I'll have them bring me a little broth and go to bed."

She had gotten out of her coat now and drawn a pillow under her head.

"Now see here, there's no sense in giving way like that. Of course you feel bad. Feel rotten myself, but I tell you what you want is FOOD! We could get dinner here, but a hotel restaurant can't touch Simpson's for plain, nourishing food. Come on, now—freshen up! I'll get a taxi and we'll be there in five minutes."

Helen rose dizzily from her bed. How COULD she go? It was cruel of Warren to drag her out again.

A tap at the door and a maid came in with a tin of hot water and towels.

OTHER ORDERS

"Anything else, sir?"

"Yes, we'll both want a bath tonight. How about your bathrooms here?" asked Warren.

"There's only one on this floor, sir. If you'll just ring when you want it, sir."

"Only one on a floor," muttered Warren, as the girl went out. "That's English for you. Wait, I'll open that," for Helen was trying weakly to open her dressing case.

Half an hour later, washed and freshened up, they started for Simpson's.

"By Jove, it's good to be in London again! Wish we could stay here a week!" exclaimed Warren, as he gazed out the taxicab window.

Helen loved street scenes and would have reveled in this night ride through London had she been well. But now she leaned back with half-closed eyes. Why had she let Warren force her to come out again? What if she should be ill tomorrow—so ill that they could not sail? She felt as though she was on the verge of a serious sickness.

"Dear, feel my head—don't you think I'm feverish?" lifting Warren's hand to her forehead.

"No, cool as a cucumber. I tell you nothing's the matter with you except you're hungry. Just wait till you get something to eat. Ah, we're in the Strand now. Look out, you don't want to miss this."

At any other time Helen would have been hanging out the cab window, drinking in the lights and crowds, but now she leaned back listlessly.

"Here we are," as Warren helped her out before the most famous chop house in London.

It is a huge place with modern additions, but Warren made straight for the main room, in the old part.

VERY SECLUDED

Helen was glad of the stall-like arrangement of the seats, for there was an air of seclusion in the leather cushioned partitions which shielded them from the gaze of the other diners.

"Bring a cocktail and a glass of sherry and bitters for the lady," demanded Warren. "I'll take a Scotch highball. Rush those on, then I'll give you the order."

Now, I don't want a thing but some chicken broth."

"That's all right. You just lean back there. I'll do the ordering."

The service at Simpson's is prompt and efficient, and in a very short time two large grilled chops, smoking from the coals, some freshly baked potatoes with browning jackets, and an order of grilled tomatoes was before them.

Warren cut up one of the chops for Helen, opened a huge potato and filled it with butter and paprika.

"There," pushing back her plate, "I've thinned you that much; now pitch in."

Everything was delicious. Perhaps it was the change from the more finely cooked dishes in Paris that made this dinner seem so good.

Helen began by tasting things gingerly, then she ate ravenously. She WAS hungry! It was humiliating to admit that food—just plain, hearty food—could make her feel better so quickly.

But just now Warren was too busy "boiling" his own dinner to make triumphant remarks.

"Two mugs of half-and-half," he ordered. "And—hold on, there, waiter—any Bubble and Squeak tonight?"

"Yes, sir; it's on the special—"

"All right; bring me on an order."

"Bubble and Squeak," repeated Helen. "That's a famous old English dish, and they know how to make it here. Perking up, are you?" as he put another grilled tomato on Helen's half-empty plate.

WARREN IS RIGHT

"Yes, dear, I WAS hungry," she admitted humbly.

"Of course you were," genially. "You can't take that channel trip on an empty stomach and not be knocked out. And when you feel like that you don't want any luxury in it. What you want is good, plain food, and you can't beat this place for that."

"Sorry to keep you waiting, sir, but they had to cook it fresh," apologized the waiter, as he now brought on a covered dish.

"Now, here's your Bubble and Squeak," and Warren helped Helen liberally to the delicately browned mixture.

"Why, it's just mashed potatoes mixed with cabbage—and then baked!" exclaimed Helen, investigating it with her fork.

"Yes, but just mashed potatoes and cabbage don't make Bubble and Squeak. There's a whole lot in how it's done. Ever lose anything better than that?"

Just then a short, white-aproned waiter-rapped current showed by a rolling stand of roast beef and mutton. He stopped at the stall next to theirs and Helen watched him carve a thick slice of red, juicy roast beef.

"Guess that old guy's been here thirty years," said Warren. "He carved for me peter years ago and was a veteran then. Look at that motion—there's slightly less places could see a joint like that. And with him since it, that carving's a work of art."

"Oh, I really can't eat any more," laughed Helen as a moment later Warren still put another grilled tomato on her plate.

"All right. Guess you've done pretty well. Feel better?"

"Yes, dear, SO much better."

"Fine! Now we'll not spoil this dinner with any dessert. Simpson's is no place for sweets. But a little Stilton cheese would be bad. Then we'll take up a cab right back to the hotel, get a good hot bath and turn in. By morning you'll feel like a fighting cock."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TELL HIM YOUR DECISION

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A young gentleman friend of mine asked me to take me to the theatre. I told him I would think it over. As yet he has not asked me about it. What shall I do?

LOVESICK.

I AM afraid that your reply offended him, as no man likes his invitations accepted that way.

However, you told him to wait. Write him a note explaining that you have at last decided, and will be pleased call to learn your decision. If he fails to call, you may know he doesn't care to renew the invitation. In that case, save yourself further humiliation by letting the matter drop.

PERHAPS HE IS SHY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am working in a place of business with a man of whom I think a great deal. Any time I write him to call to see me he appears to be quite delighted and fails, but never makes any effort to call except when I ask him. Don't you think he should ask me if he can call?

PUZZLED.

SUCH a request from him would show an interest in you which he now seems to lack. You say he always accepts and is delighted. That encourages me in the belief that he thinks a great deal of you, but is bashful.

Don't ask him for a time. I have asked him he will speedily ask you.

Here can I meet her and tell her of my love? RALPH.

PERHAPS she has never received them.

Call at her home and learn your fate from her own lips. It may require courage, but boldness in a lover is a trait which all girls admire.

AS YOU THINK BEST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am invited to an automobile outing, and we are to be a party of twelve (six couples).

The arrangement was that the young ladies are to meet their partners at a certain place. Now I do not approve of this arrangement.

Do you think it right or are we to tell the young man I am to go with what I think and ask him to call for me?

The other girls did not seem to have any objections.

A CONSTANT READER.

IF you object to the plans, you certainly have the right to say so. But, on the other hand, have you considered that it would be most inconvenient and cause a loss of time for every man to call for his partner? There could be no impropriety in six girls waiting at the same place for their escorts.

New Record Needed

At an English political meeting the candidate was considerably heckled by the opposition, who had attended in strong force. But after smartly turning the interruptions to his own advantage for some time, a little man in the middle of the hall stood up and shouted: "You speak like a gramophone."

Instantly the candidate replied: "Yes, my friend, I speak like a gramophone. I speak from that which is within me."

Like a flash of lightning the retort came back: "Yes, and you want a new record very badly."

STOCK MARKET AND FINANCIAL NEWS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

There was not much trading in stocks in Boston this morning and price changes were narrow. There was no morning session of the New York Stock Exchange, the latter closing for two hours out of respect for the late Mayor Gaynor.

Boston & Maine made a good gain in the market, rising 1½ to 61. New Haven and Boston Elevated were unchanged. Mining issues were very sluggish. There was a slump in the London Kaffir's market at the beginning.

In London trading Americans were helped by the character of Saturday's New York bank statement, which showed a large decrease in loans, and general sentiment was cheerful in London and prices were firmer in general.

To Finish Tariff This Week.

That President Wilson will have the tariff bill before him for signature by Saturday night next is stated in Washington by persons close to the administration. The conferees have yet to agree on the income tax clause, cotton futures tax and administrative provisions.

It is said that in so far in the conference about $15,000,000 has been cut off the prospective revenue and that there is now worry lest the new schedules, together with the income tax, fail to provide enough to pay government expenses.

It is stated that the amendment to impose the internal revenue tax on the brandy used in producers of sweet wines, which the Senate Committee yielded, threw $8,000,000 out. Reducing sugars to the free list meant a loss of $3,500,000, while the compromise on Zante currants added another $500,000.

Expect Delay on Currency.

Belief grows that there is going to be more delay in passing a currency bill than the administration has expected. The opposition to the proposed bill is strong enough to cause a great deal of apprehension. Help is expected by those who wish speedy action from Attorney Samuel Untermeyer of New York, who prepared the report of the Pujo committee and recently returned from a quest for information on the same subject in Europe. He will appear before the Senate Banking Committee today, and it is said he may "point out some of the inside details of New York banking that will have a marked effect upon the final draft of the measure."

There are seven Democrats and five Republicans on the committee, and to get the currency bill favorably reported every Democratic vote is needed. The plan of the opposition is to keep the bill in committee until the next session of Congress.

Some of the Democratic Senators are in a hurry to have the bill reported despite the desire for urgent action expressed by President Wilson. There is a demand for the most careful consideration that can be obtained and two New York bankers are to be asked to furnish some. They are President Frank A. Vanderlip and Vice President Joseph Talbert of the National City Bank.

"Insiders" Buying Reading?

It is understood in speculative circles that Reading has been heavily bought by "insiders" of late and this carries conviction to many that that company will soon cut a "melon." It may do so. It is thought, before Union Pacific makes the expected distribution which has lent so much support to the stock market.

"It has long been gossip in the financial district," it is said, "that the minimum value of assets, under segregation, of the Reading Company would give a nominal value to the Common Stock of Reading of about $225 a share. The annual report fails to throw any light on the intrinsic value of the property and the arrangement of the figures is accepted as a cloak covering its true worth, while the insiders do not care to make public until all rivals their convenience.

"Recent events point to the conclusion that a 'melon cutting' may result, irrespective of any decision of the courts in the suits lately inaugurated by the government."

Berlin Fears Shift in Gold.

There are fears on the part of Berlin bankers who have been seeking gold wherever obtainable in order to strengthen Germany's reserves that they may soon have to face New York competition. The financial correspondent for Hearst newspapers at the German capital relates:

"The prospect of New York's drawing gold from London has caused a disturbing factor in Berlin's monetary calculations. The financial community had been reckoning upon the possibility of a reduction in the bank rate in October. This seemed warranted by the improvement in the Reichsbank's position.

"But if London's monetary situation should be seriously affected by American influences the Reichsbank may be forced to omit a reduction."

Financial News in Brief.

The London copper warrants market opened weak, spot being off 13s. 9d. and futures 12s. 6d. lower.

It is said that Standard Oil has perfected a process by which a much greater amount of gasoline may be refined from crude oil. One authority predicts a new grade of gasoline for automobiles which will sell for four cents a gallon less than the present price.

There is fear in Philadelphia that the cost of eggs may rise to $1 a dozen, if the food commissioner executes his threat to seize all eggs held cold storage and adjudge them unfit for use.

Cardenas, Assassin of Madero, Slain

Last Witness of Death Plot "Knew Too Much.'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The assassin of Former President Madero of Mexico has himself been assassinated. Lieutenant Colonel Francisco Cardenas, who shot the Mexican executive on the night of the tragic ride from Palace to penitentiary, has been murdered at Michoachin, according to reports received today at the Carranza headquarters here.

With Cardenas died the last living witness of the Madero tragedy. Vice President Pino Suarez died when his chief died in the back, as was Madero. The soldiers in the automobile were executed, "in the interests of peace," but Cardenas, who commanded the soldiers, was promoted. And now he is dead.

Carbuncle Vaccine May Cure Asthma

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—Through the treatment of Benjamin B. Abrahams with anti-carbuncle vaccine, physicians believed they may have discovered at least a preventive, if not a cure for, asthma. Recently Abrahams was cured with the anti-carbuncle vaccine to relieve his carbuncles. After the treatment he noticed his asthma improved.

Conditions—Boston American Picture Puzzle Contest

The Boston American Picture Puzzle Contest is a contest of skill and judgment to all readers of the Boston American, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

One hundred and fifty-five cash prizes will be given, absolutely free, by the Boston American to the winners.

All employees of the Boston American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

The contest will consist of eighty-five puzzle pictures, to be printed one each day, consecutively, in the daily and Sunday American, first picture Sunday, September 21.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running, or which may be run by the Boston American, will not debar any one from entering this contest.

Every contestant or any of all members of a family will be allowed to submit one, two or three SETS of answers, but each SET must contain only ONE answer to each picture.

Each SET will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize, and not more than one prize will be awarded in any one family.

Each and every answer must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished for the Boston American, on page 4 some form in each issue. Pencil suggested either by the puzzle picture furnished by the Boston American or by Keen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the contestant on each answer blank.

No. 3 must send your solution in "full" form, i. e., do not write answers under the another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions, giving weight to skill and judgment.

In case of a tie, awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way, the said contestants will receive similar prizes.

Under no circumstances should contestants send in their answers before the end of the contest, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. Keep your answers from day to day, and when the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together, at one time.

There will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the last picture is printed will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered in the Boston American Contest Headquarters, at No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, on or before the specified time limit. It is understood by all contestants that they take their chances of winning a prize.

The Boston American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers, unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "Picture Puzzle Contest Editor, No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass."

The Boston American will not enter into any correspondence, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rate, as mail will be delivered to the Editor of this contest in this matter. The Boston American reserves the right to refuse any sets of answers or any answers which in its opinion are not fair contestants.

There will be no answer book to buy. A list of several hundred names or titles will be printed in the Sunday American each week during the life of the contest. This list, appearing each Sunday, will contain, among others, the CORRECT answers to the pictures to be used during the week beginning with each Sunday list publication.

Contestants will be further informed as to their standing and should address their inquiries to the "Picture Puzzle Contest Editor," No. 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass. Only one contestant can be awarded a prize, as far as possible, through the cooperation of the Boston American. If contestants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such a reply, or they may phone Main 5180, or call in person.

The Boston American reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly and properly conducting the contest and the decision of the Boston American Contest Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entering of a contestant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

CASSIDY TELLS OF POISONOUS MUSHROOMS

Antonio Ricci, an experienced chef of Hartford, Ct., died last week of eating toadstools he mistook for mushrooms. There is grave danger for the inexperienced in picking this fungus growth. Mr. Cassidy tells you today how some of the best scientific men of the government service view this question.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

"How can I tell an edible from a poisonous toadstool?" is often asked me by lovers of this succulent article of food.

Scientists say there is only one way to tell. That is, by studying toadstools and becoming as familiar with them as with any of the more common plants of the hill, forest and garden.

Only last week I saw a man picking these fungi. I asked him how he was able to distinguish the toadstool from the mushroom. "If the under side of the umbrella-like structure is pink," he said, "I know it is an edible toadstool."

Antonio Ricci, a well known chef of Hartford evidently felt as much for my friend. But Mr. Ricci died from eating poisonous toadstools he had picked in Elizabeth Park, Hartford.

And Mr. Ricci in his profession as chef had probably cooked thousands of toadstools for diners. How much more liable the average person is to eat of poisonous toadstools.

Among most people the name "toadstool" is restricted to the poisonous species of fungi and that of "mushroom" to the edible kind.

This is very unsatisfactory because it is impossible to tell one from the other except by eating. And this proof of the pudding is in the "eating," is a poor proverb after one dies from the eating.

Various tests familiar to people in different sections of the country are unreliable. One of the most common is the so-called "silver test." This consists of placing a silver spoon or coin with the mushroom while cooking. The blackening or failure to blacken is taken as proof to determine whether the fungi is or is not poisonous.

Both the innocent and the poisonous mushrooms will act on silver so the test is of no value.

Many people test the mushroom by tasting. This is a dangerous method. The belief that the poisonous species are bitter or peppery is not a safe guide.

The only certain method of testing toadstools is by eating them. Scientists say the best method is to learn by the experience of others. Housewives who are fond of mushrooms as food accessories or condiments are advised by the same experts to purchase them whenever possible for men who have cultivated the fungi.

The cultivation of toadstools is now an established industry in most sections of the country. When a careful housewife buys her mushrooms from regular dealers who handle only the cultivated product, she is sure of getting the edible kind.

Besides being assured that the mushrooms are free from the poisonous, the housewife will procure a mushroom of more delicate texture and of better flavor than those purchased at haphazard from unknown dealers.

VIOLATOR OF PARTY PLEDGE QUITS FIELD

Representative William J. Graham of Lawrence, one of the Democrats who broke faith with their party in supporting the New Haven trolley grab, today gave up the fight for a renomination. In an open letter addressed to the voters of his district, he urges that they do not consider him as a candidate, but vote for his opponents.

Graham has held office for eleven years, but his defeat at the primaries tomorrow was said to be a foregone conclusion because of his corporation leanings. Following the AMERICAN'S exposure of his betrayal of his trust when voting for railroad measures his defeat is said to have been assured.

Representative Graham, in his open letter today, does not give any reason for withdrawing. Neither does his action concern the issue that is the primary ballot. That, he says, need have no weight with the voters.

He does say that the voters cast their ballots either for James T. O'Donnell or John McCarthy, the opposition candidates.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The widespread popularity of Massachusetts as a touring ground for motorists is shown in the figures provided by Daniel J. Honan of the Highway Commission.

The figures show that up to Saturday there have been registered for three months 918 non-registered cars. In this list is represented 33 of the 48 States in the United States, the District of Columbia, three foreign countries and one dependency. The foreign countries are Canada, England, Cuba, and Porto Rico also had a representative.

The largest number of non-residents came from New York, numbering 277. New Jersey was second with 97, Pennsylvania was third with 90, Connecticut sent 53, Missouri 52, Illinois and Rhode Island 51 each, and 38 came from Ohio. The cars that made the longest distance were three from California, twelve from Texas and twelve from Florida. Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Idaho, Mississippi, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wyoming were not represented. These States did not register under the non-resident registration, but it is more than likely that cars from these States have been in Massachusetts for a period of a few days during the Summer.

REP. JOHN ENNIS OF WILLIAMSTOWN.

This is a Democratic representative who did not hesitate to cast a vote satisfactory only to the all-righteous railroad monopoly. Mr. Ennis voted for the Western Trolley Merger Bill which gave to this powerful monopoly the street railways in more than one-half the State. Another man might have felt bound to carry out the promises of the Democratic party platform when it said: "WE ARE OPPOSED TO THE OWNERSHIP OR CONTROL OF OUR STREET RAILWAYS BY STEAM RAILROADS, AND WE BELIEVE THAT IT SHOULD GO NO FARTHER IN THIS COMMONWEALTH," but not Mr. Ennis.

Another man might have felt that the interests of the State were best served by following the advice of impartial railroad experts in this matter, such as the Tax Commissioner, the Railroad Commission, the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Public Franchise League, the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange and the Interstate Commerce Commission; but Mr. Ennis was wise enough to know that these impartial opinions should be disregarded and he should follow the wishes of the railroad monopoly.

Do you think that this man should be allowed to represent you any longer? A vote to renominate this man and put him on the same ballot with Mr. Walsh is a vote to tie Mr. Walsh up with the railroad interests and put Mr. Walsh on the defensive in the campaign and keep him explaining and apologizing for his painful association with a man whom he regards as a party traitor.

Democrats of Massachusetts: See to It That NOT ONE of the Party Traitors Who Voted for the Trolley Merger Bill Is Renominated at the Primary Election Tomorrow

Democrats of Massachusetts:

Tomorrow is primary election day, when you will nominate the candidates of the Democratic party.

To all the citizens primary election day is as important as the final elections, because you cannot elect in November better men than you nominate tomorrow, except on an independent ticket.

Tomorrow is ESPECIALLY and UNUSUALLY important to the Democrats of Massachusetts. You, Democrats, have a stern duty to perform for the sake of the honor of your party and the interest of the State. IT IS NECESSARY TO DEFEAT FOR RENOMINATION EVERY DEMOCRATIC MEMBER OF LAST YEAR'S LEGISLATURE WHO VOTED TO GIVE THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD TRUST the Massachusetts street railways.

These recreant Democratic representatives and senators should BE PUNISHED BY THE DEMOCRATS THEMSELVES for several reasons:

FIRST, because they violated the solemn instructions of the whole Democratic party which declared in convention that it was opposed to the "ownership or control over street railways by the steam railroads."

SECOND, because these Democratic apostates dishonored their party by breaking its promise to the people that it would oppose surrendering the street railways to the railroad trust.

THIRD, because if you Democrats renominate these men who betrayed you and broke your party promises and violated your party principles, the people of Massachusetts cannot help believing that your party promises are meant to be broken and your principles are false and delusive.

FOURTH, because Lieutenant-Governor Walsh has declared that the law these men voted for must be repealed and that these men, when they voted for it, committed "THE HIGHEST FORM OF POLITICAL TREASON."

FIFTH, because if you renominate these men on the same ticket with Lieutenant-Governor Walsh, you surround him and load him down with a lot of traitors to the party and to the State and perhaps sink him in defeat.

SIXTH, because above everything else you want good men whom no railroad monopoly can own and who will not surrender your interests to a lot of Wall Street gamblers who are conspiring to tax us for some more great private estates, yachts, race tracks and automobiles.

Tomorrow the Democratic party will need every Democrat to do his duty by defeating every one of those recreant Democrats who betrayed their platform, defied their Democratic Governor, brought shame on their party, jeopardized the chance of success this Fall and injured the welfare of the State.

Let Young Astor Fly All He Pleases.

What Better Could He Do Than Help on Our Conquest of the Air—Even if He Died Flying?

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

Young Vincent Astor, who inherited about one hundred millions when his father went down on the Titanic, has a hydroaeroplane, and imitating Harold McCormick of Chicago, the pioneer airship commuter, young Astor will fly his own machine up and down the Hudson, getting as near to the clouds as his courage will let him, or keeping as close to the water as prudence may dictate.

Astor's friends are begging him not to do this—BUT WHY?

What can a young man with money do better than use the money and use himself in a flying machine!

A man who is too rich for business or for a profession, and who is not given to thinking in a fashion that will help solve important problems, can't do better than take up flying.

Rich men of olden days used to amuse themselves with conquests.

They went out with fighting men, murdered their neighbors, took their territory, called it GLORY, and enjoyed themselves.

Since men have learned to read, to think and to make laws for themselves, we no longer permit the rich men to have fun in that particular conquering way.

But there is plenty of conquering still to be done.

If young Astor wants the excitement of the barons of old, let him turn his millions, not into FIGHTING MEN, but into flying machines.

Let him go up as high and as far as he pleases and CONQUER THE AIR.

If he succeeds, he will have genuine glory.

If some day he falls, he will be pitied, admired, thanked, and, as he must realize, even that would be better than wasting his life spending money and doing nothing.

Fly high and wide, young Astor. Good luck go with you.

Build all the flying machines you can, hire first class professional flyers to do what you cannot or dare not do.

The world will thank you if you hasten by one day complete confidence in the conquest of the air.

It is considered worth while for a man to lose his life fighting some unseen enemy for his country.

Certainly it is worth while for a man to lose his life fighting the power of nature, and helping to make man the real ruler of this earth, its waters, its land and its atmosphere.

Only, Mr. Astor, don't be satisfied with merely flying around and showing off in the machine that somebody else has developed.

Spend your money, your time and brains trying to develop a BETTER machine.

Put a million into a big lighter-than-air machine, and see how many tons, how many passengers you can carry. Try to do what Zeppelin did, only better.

And put another million or so into the heavier-than-air machine, and the perfect gas engine.

And if your imagination will let you do it, hire a few first class scientists to see what can be done in the way of developing a machine that will get electric power from earth by "wireless."

Wireless POWER may solve the flying problem. Solve the WIRELESS POWER problem, and you will be remembered in years to come when Croesus and Rothschild and all the Astors before you will be forgotten and vanished like the checks to which they signed their names—just as John D. Rockefeller will be remembered for his magnificent scientific research work, his gifts to education and other public purposes, long after future generations shall have ceased to know or care how much money he had or how he got it.

ADMIRES THE AMERICAN

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Your editorial regarding the Thaw case is, as usual, the best and most virile comment on a current event of national and international interest, and I heartily indorse every word of it. And I take this occasion to say, what I have wished to state for years, that your editorials alone stamp your paper as the greatest newspaper I have ever read.

The editorial page alone is, I believe, worth more to any man than the same page from any ten papers in the United States.

Your thoughtful, scholarly and scientific treatment of hundreds of subjects in the past ten years has been a source of intellectual food that has nourished my brain as no other mental pabulum has ever done. You have taught me to think and to reason; you have been instrumental in elevating my brain to a higher plane of intellectual existence; you have illumined hundreds of dark problems that have confronted me as I journeyed along; you have taught me valuable lessons in politics, science, sociology, religion and history, and I have a sense of appreciation for it all that has made me a life-long friend of your great papers.

I am still reading, still absorbing, still thinking and reasoning my way through life aided, encouraged and inspired by each new issue of that greatest of all newspapers.

Truly and gratefully yours,

F. M. LADD, M. D.

REEL LOVE

By H. S. HASKINS

I've seen her dance,
I know her walk,
Have watched her ride,
And swim and talk.

I've seen her run,
And jump and play,
Have known her sad,
Beheld her gay.

I note her laugh,
I heed her cry,
And when she's hurt
I've watched her die.

She always dies,
With little pain—
Then comes right back
To life again.

And starts once more
The same mad whirl—
My little Moving
Picture Girl.

Snap-Shots

Oh, Joy that comes and may not stay,
Shall I then curse thee for thy going?
Does dismal night make happy day
Less worthy of the knowing?

Oh, Day that comes and may not bide,
Must all light fail when thou art going?
After thy death at eventide
Will night-time stars be glowing?

Oh, Joy! Oh, Day! that might not stay!
Far in the East new dawn is glowing;
There needs must be another day—
The other joy I shall be knowing.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

If a woman is as old as she looks before breakfast, a man's disposition is much as it appears at the same meal.

When a woman really begins to criticise herself the result would satisfy her worst enemy; when a man puts himself on trial the verdict is usually for the defendant.

Nothing seems more delightful to most of "Us Girls" than to look so adorable that Mister Man wants to kiss us and then scold him roundly for his impudence.

Don't be a martyr—they never were popular, and burning at the stake used to be a favorite way of disposing of them.

Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness!
Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun!
Conspiring with him how to load and bless
With fruit the vines that round the thatch-eaves run—
To bend with apples the mossed cottage trees,
And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core—
To swell the gourd, and plump the hazel shells
With sweet kernel—to set budding more
And still more, later flowers for the bees,
Until they think warm days will never cease,
For Summer has o'er brimmed their clammy cells.

JOHN KEATS.

What a grim thing it is! that you and I
So intimate, so bound by every tie,
Can never read each other's secret thought—
Must be contented with the glimpse we've caught!
Can face each other calmly, eye to eye,
And with our souls protesting, speak a lie—
That while you wound me with indifference,
Or cruel words, or meagre recompense,
Your heart with love for me may be aglow.
Yet looking in your eyes—I cannot know.
